PITTSBURGH ROCKED BY EXPLOSION

EIGHT PERISH IN APARTMENT HOTEL FIRE HUNDREDS REPORTED KILLED OR INJURED; NORTHSIDE WRECKED

BLAZE IN ELEVATOR SHAFT BARS ESCAPE OF TRAPPED PEOPLE

Indianapolis Coroner Finds Fire Escape Next To Elevator

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 14.—Coroner Keever will open his inquest today into the deaths of eight persons who lost their lives in a fire which destroyed a three-story apartment hotel here early Sunday morning. Twelve others, who were badly injured, are being treated at local hospitals.

Following an examination of the ruins, Coroner Keever said the victims had been trapped "without a chance for their lives." He said the building's only fire escape was next to an elevator shaft through which the flames shot up.

Those who died, were Stella Kimbrell, Alice Durr, Leroy Zimmerman, Elizabeth Bussell, Erna Bussell, Ruth Rowlands, Mrs. Jessie P. Campbell and an unidentified woman.

BATAVIA, O., Nov. 14.—Four people, all members of one family, who perished in a fire which destroyed their home at Williamsport Saturday, are to be buried in one coffin at Mt. Orab, near here this afternoon.

Mrs. Maggie Darlington, 23, died Sunday morning of burns she received from an explosion which occurred when she attempted to light a fire in a cookstove, at her home, Williamsport, Saturday morning. Her husband, Jesse Darlington, 25, lifted her through a window, but he and his mother, Mrs. Nancy Darlington, 55, and his seven-months old son, Joseph William, were trapped and burned to death in the house.

CAMPUS RESEMBLED HOUSE OF DAVID

FINDLAY, O., Nov. 14.—Members of the Findlay College "Pep" squad who resolved not to shave until the Findlay gridders won a football game have abandoned their stand. When persistent rumors that two of the Orange line men and their captain, a backfield star, would not be in the games with Toledo and Adrian colleges, were confirmed by a formal announcement, hopes for a victory this season were abandoned.

Stalking hand-in-hand with the probable defeat was the prospect of waiting until the next season for the Findlay eleven to bring home a victory and allow the bewildered rooters to wield their razors.

GIRL MISTAKEN FOR BURGLAR IS KILLED

VALPARAISO, Ind., Nov. 14.—Inquest will be held today into the death of Miss Mildred Gratton, 17, who was shot and killed by her girl friend's father yesterday when he mistook her for a burglar. Returning late from a dance, the girl found herself locked out at home. So she went to the home of Viola Perse, her chum. She was climbing through a window when Viola's father saw her and fired, thinking she was a burglar.

CANTON PICKED

CANTON, O., Nov. 14.—The General Motors Corporation has selected Canton as sales and service headquarters for the Delco Light Company, one of its subsidiaries. It was learned here today. Headquarters are to be moved here from Cleveland and will become the distributing point for eighteen counties of northeastern Ohio. Two other branches are at Columbus and Dayton. E. A. Parry, formerly of the Dayton branch, will have charge here. It was said.

HAS CHAMP EWE

CHARDON, O., Nov. 14.—E. L. Young of Chardon claims to have the champion shorthorn ewe of Ohio and possibly the United States.

In six years she has given birth to sixteen lambs. Two years she had triplets, three years twins and last March gave birth to twins, repeating with twins on October 22.

PUT AWAY POTATOES

CHARDON, O., Nov. 12.—John H. Bess, of Burton, ate four pounds and six ounces of mashed potatoes in fifteen minutes at Burton at the annual potato show and is eligible to compete in the northeastern Ohio show to be held in Cleveland.

A Mayor at Last

L. Ert Slack, Democrat and unsuccessful contender for the United States senatorial nomination, is serving as mayor of Indianapolis after a hectic period during which several persons claimed the mayoralty. Slack was elected by city council.

HENRY SANBORN, 81, ENDS LIFE SUNDAY WITH PISTOL SHOT

Loneliness Blamed By Friends For Suicide Of Aged Xenian

Henry P. Sanborn, 81, well-to-do retired business man, ended his life in the bedroom of his home on Rogers St., sometime between 5:30 and 6 o'clock Sunday morning by shooting himself in the right temple.

The body, clad in underwear, was discovered by L. G. McCoy, about 8 o'clock when he went to Mr. Sanborn's bedroom to call him. Mr. and Mrs. McCoy had been making their home with Mr. Sanborn two months, but are said to have been planning to move.

McCoy summoned Dr. F. M. Chambliss, coroner, who investigated with Patrolman Fred Jones and believes death took place instantly. Circumstances indicated that the aged man had planned his suicide carefully. Accustomed to arise at 5 o'clock, it is believed he arose at the usual time, pulled down the window blinds, and placed a comfort under the rocking chair in which he sat when committing the deed.

He used an old .32 calibre revolver, which was found in his lap, resting in his left hand. The bullet, which entered at the right temple, pierced the head and struck the wall of the room. The bedroom is on the second floor and Mr. and Mrs. McCoy, who sleep downstairs, were not aroused.

Although Sanborn left no note, friends and relatives believed he had planned the deed for some time, and say that he had hinted at such an act. Both his wife and an only son preceded him in death, and loneliness is believed to have caused despondency. Although apparently in his usual spirits Saturday, he sold a cow, the last he owned, and completed the transfer of certain papers to his sister-in-law, Mrs. Maude Stark, who for five years until two months ago, was his housekeeper, living there with his sister, Mrs. Lois Olcott.

A strong box containing valuable papers was found in the room in which the suicide took place, but the suicide was the first in the experience of Coroner Chambliss in which no note of explanation was left. Mr. Sanborn was born in New Hampshire June 15, 1846, and came to Ohio when a young man.

For a number of years before and after his marriage to Miss Julia Stark, member of a well-known Greene County family, he operated a railroad restaurant at the Pennsylvania station. Thirty-five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn moved to the property on Rogers St., where for a number of years they conducted a home dairy.

Their only son, Louis Sanborn, who was connected with the Burroughs Adding Machine Co., drowned at Detroit, Mich., thirteen years ago and Mrs. Sanborn died eight years ago. A sister, Mrs. Sarah Balch, Andover, Mass., survives, with ten nieces and nephews located in New England and California.

A nephew, George McNeff, Xenia, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Stark, are the nearest surviving relatives here. Funeral services will be held at the Woodland Cemetery Chapel at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday and burial will be made there beside the bodies of his wife and son.

GRANGE IN HOSPITAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Red Grange, New York Yankee professional football star, today definitely retired to a hospital for a lengthy rest as his right leg was placed in a plaster cast. Water on the knee has developed, physicians said. C. C. Pyle, owner of the Yankees, announced that Grange would be in action again in time for the Thanksgiving game with Benny Friedman's Bulldogs.

GEORGE REMUS WILL PLEAD "TEMPORARY INSANITY" HE SAYS

Former Bootlegging King To Conduct His Own Defense

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 14.—George Remus, one-time millionaire "King of the Bootleggers," who goes on trial today for the murder of his wife, Imogene, whom he shot and killed in Eden Park, Cincinnati, on Oct. 6, will plead "transitory mental insanity," he told the writer in his cell on the sixth floor of the county building this morning, as he prepared to go to court.

"Remus brain exploded when he shot her," said Remus. "He was momentarily out of his mind." Remus always refers to himself as "Remus," seldom using the first person pronoun. It is not "my trial," it is "Remus' trial." A former Chicago criminal lawyer, Remus will act as his own attorney, being assisted by his co-counsel, Charles H. Elston. Remus said he would make the opening defense plea to the jury himself and that he planned to take part in the cross examination of witnesses.

Seventy-five men, from whom the jury will be selected, this morning in Judge Chester R. Shook's criminal court where the trial will be held.

Arrayed against the defense will be three attorneys for the state led by Charles P. Taft, son of President of the United States, Attorney General Howard Taft, former president of the United States, Attorney Taft recently demanded the death penalty and the electric chair for Remus.

In his cell in the sixth floor of the county building Remus graciously received the International News Service correspondent. He is excessively polite and his speech is sprinkled with legal phraseology, such remarks as "the said witness," or "the defendant Remus," giving his conversation a fantastic twist.

He ushered the reporter into his "office," a room assigned to him close to his cell. He used this office in preparing his case. The table in the room is "doing time" for law books. A "doorman" for the International News Service, who is Remus' stenographer, Holly wreaths, sent to him by friends, adorned the walls.

"I feel fine physically and as well mentally as is possible under the circumstances," said Remus in response to a question. Remus paused thoughtfully, a frown wrinkling his massive forehead.

"I am making the best of a damnable situation," he declared. "I am of course mentally depressed at times. What can one expect when confined in prison and in the predicament Remus finds himself?"

Remus, during a conversation, lastly referred to "him" and "her," edly referred to "him" and "her," meaning Franklin L. Dodge, Jr., a former dry agent, and Mrs. Remus. "I killed her," the bald-headed bootleg king declared "because she double-crossed me for him. It was too much. It weighed upon my mind, and on that fatal morning, early in October, my brain exploded and I shot her dead."

"She and that man had done all in their power to ruin me. She had seduced me for him, my bitterest enemy she robbed me of my fortune, had me kept in jail. Had plot to have me killed and even tried to have me deported to a country I had not been in for forty-six years—since I was three years old."

"So when I followed her taxi in my car in Eden Park on the morning of October 6, I thought of all these things. I knew she was then on her way to court to divorce me. When I caught up to her and seized her by the hand, intending to ask her to give up the life she was leading. And she said, 'Daddy, don't hurt me, you know I love you,' why my mind just blew up and I shot her. I knew she was not sincere. She got her just deserts, almost sardonically."

"Love—love," he repeated, "Love isn't the word." He looked at the floor for several minutes without uttering a word. Then said softly: "The woman she was when I married her I loved—yes, indeed. But how she changed when that man wormed his way into her good graces."

Remus said he had received countless offers of financial assistance, but had turned them all down.

"I want moral support more than anything else in the world now," he declared. "With it Remus can win this legal battle."

"It is too late for remorse now," he said sadly, "but I regret that I ever gave up law and turned my mind and energies to circumventing the prohibition law. There is more in life than money. Money will not bring happiness or contentment. I have found that out to my sorrow."

"I am a martyr to the cause of prohibition—the greatest legal abortion ever put on the statute books."

WASHINGTON ENTERTAINS AERIAL ARISTOCRACY TO HONOR LINDBERGH

TWO BELIEVED FATALLY HURT WHEN BUS AND TWO AUTOS CRASH

NELSONVILLE, O., Nov. 14.—Two persons were in a hospital at Logan today with injuries which may prove fatal, and twelve others were recovering from minor injuries as the result of a crash between a motor bus and two automobiles near here Sunday. The bus, traveling north, was spun half way around when one of its wheels was knocked off by an automobile. Immediately afterwards, an automobile driven by Harvey Ruble, of Haydenville, crashed into the bus, turning it over. Ruble and his wife were slightly hurt and Miss Zoe Pollock, 18, of Haydenville, Mrs. Ruble's sister, suffered concussion of the brain. Wilford Pickett, 45, of Haydenville, a passenger on the bus, attempted to jump and was crushed beneath the overturning vehicle. Ten other passengers on the bus were slightly hurt. Both Miss Pollock and Pickett were taken to a hospital at Logan, where they were reported in critical condition today.

RADIO COMMISSION TO CLEAR CHANNELS FOR BIG STATIONS

National Stations To Be Favored By Clarifying Wave

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Another major surgical operation on radio frequency allocations will be announced soon by the Federal Radio Commission.

Admiral W. H. G. Bullard, chairman of the commission, said today that plans are being made to clear of interference the channels between 229.7 and 499.8 meters, giving virtually unimpeded broadcasting lanes for thirty-five national stations.

This section of the radio setup—600 to 1000 kilocycles—is most important from the listener's standpoint, for within these limits are placed practically all of the high power and go-called national broadcasting stations.

A successful method of eliminating interference is found by the commission one of the greatest contributions to long distance reception made since the government began its radio work.

Admiral Bullard for sometime has favored a plan of clearing the etherways for a certain number of big stations, concentrating the smaller broadcasters, with local scope and appeal programs, to other sections of the "dial."

No details of the project were disclosed, but it was assumed that the commission would resort to removal of a number of the 145 stations now operating between 600 and 1,000 kilocycles to other sections of the broadcasting channel of 550 to 1,500 kilocycles, power cutting in some cases, with rearrangement of greater frequency separation between high power stations.

For some time the commission has had the wave length allocations under the X-ray. Thousands of letters from radio fans all over the country disclosing both public opinion as to popularity of stations and interference conditions have been considered, as well as reports from the district supervisors. The bureau of standards and commerce department radio sections have cooperated in a scientific study of the latest allocations.

There are thirty-five wave channels available for distribution in the 600-1000 kilocycle band, six of them being shared with Canadian stations. Mexico and Cuba are demanding broadcasting rights.

It is not anticipated by the commission that much improvement may be hoped for in the band over 1000 kilocycles with the present number of stations on the air. This part of the set-up, suggested as a "radio graveyard" at the first public hearing of the commission, is and probably will remain just that for some time to come.

Between 600 and 1000 kilocycles are found thirty-one stations with power of 1,500 watts or greater. KDKA, Pittsburgh, WEA, New York and WGY, of Schenectady, topping the list with 50,000 watts. Other important stations in this band which probably will be benefited by the new plan include WBAF and WFAA, of Dallas, WSAI and WLW of Cincinnati, WJZ of New York, WCFL, WHT, WBBM, WLS, WCBQ, and WEBB of Chicago, WSB, of Atlanta, KFI of Los Angeles, WJR, of Pontiac, WOR of Newark, WCCO of Minneapolis, WTAM of Cleveland, KGO, Oakland, KOA of Denver, WSM of Nashville and others.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 14.—Nine persons were being treated today for injuries suffered when two crowded street cars collided at Twelfth and College Sts. here last night. Ninety other passengers were shaken up and thrown into a panic.

DARING PILOTS ARE VISITORS AT WHITE HOUSE LUNCHEON

Aviation Future To Be Discussed By Flying Aces

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The capital played host today to the aerial aristocracy of the world.

Eighteen men and a lone ship of a girl, all of whom have gained world wide fame this summer for daring trans-oceanic flights, gathered in Washington today for the dual purpose of having lunch at the White House and seeing one of their number, Col. Charles Lindbergh, receive the coveted Hubbard medal tonight.

Talk of future ocean-spanning flights filled the air as the flyers congregated. Edward P. Schlee, who, with Wm. S. Brock, flew half-way around the world, announced that a flight from Detroit to Rio de Janeiro will be attempted as soon as weather conditions are right next spring. The route to be followed, he said, would be approximately the same as that essayed by Paul Redfern, the Georgian, who lost his life while trying a Brunswick-to-Rio flight.

The trans-oceanic flyers listed as luncheon guests of President Coolidge today are: Col. Charles Lindbergh; Commander Richard E. Byrd, with his "crew" consisting of George O. Noville, Bert Acosta and Perry Hadden; Clarence L. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, the New York-to-Germany flyers; Lieutenants J. Maitland and Albert Hagenberger, first to negotiate the California-to-Hawaii flight; Arthur C. Goebel and Capt. Wm. V. Davis, winners of the Dole race; Paul Schuster and Martin E. L. Smith, another Dole flyer; Edward P. Schlee and William S. Brock, the round-the-world flyers; and lastly, Capt. George Halderman and Ruth Elder, the latest toasts in trans-oceanic flying circles.

Before one of the most distinguished audiences that ever attended a public function in the capital, President Coolidge tonight will pin the Hubbard medal on the breast of Col. Lindbergh. All of the cabinet officers who are in the city, justices of the Supreme Court, senators and congressmen, members of the diplomatic corps, the ranking heads of the army and navy, and the social elite of the capital generally will comprise the audience.

The Hubbard medal is conferred by the National Geographic Society. But seven other men in history have secured it, Commander Robert E. Peary, Capt. Roald Amundsen, Grove Carl Gilbert, Sir Ernest Shackleton, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, and Commander Richard E. Byrd.

There will be brief speeches tonight by Gilbert Grosvenor, head of the Geographic Society; Wm. P. McCracken, air secretary of the department of commerce, and Col. Lindbergh. These will be followed by the exhibition of historic flying pictures.

STATE MAY OFFER LENDEL CASE ENTRY

CANTON, O., Nov. 14.—Unless F. R. Hahn, attorney for S. A. Lengel, files a journal entry in the Lengel case within the next few days, the state will take steps to have it filed by the court here. Prosecuting Attorney Henry Harter has announced.

Until an entry is filed, no action can be taken and Harter wants to perfect an appeal to the Ohio Supreme Court to have the case reviewed. Lengel, former Canton police chief, awaits a new trial on charges of complicity in the Don Mellett murder here over a year ago.

LINDBERGH WILL BE GUEST OF COOLIDGE

CURTIS FIELD, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh left here for Bolling Field, Washington, at 9:45 a. m. today at the controls of a Fairchild cabin monoplane, to be a luncheon guest of President Coolidge at the White House. He was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, of Detroit, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gugenheim, of Port Washington.

HUNDREDS REPORTED KILLED OR INJURED; NORTHSIDE WRECKED

Blast Occurs In Gas Company Tank—Death And Destruction Spread For Miles In City's Worst Disaster—Relief Rushed

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 14.—Twenty persons are known to have been killed, eleven of whom are in the county morgue, in the explosion at the Equitable Gas Company's Reedsdale St. plant here today, police announced at 11 o'clock.

They said the list of injured is expected to exceed 500. A check of the main hospitals at this hour showed that 111 victims had been received there for treatment. The city's asphalt plant across the street from the gas tank was demolished and ten of the fifteen men at work there were reported killed.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 14.—Hundreds of persons injured and many probably were killed when a huge gas tank exploded in the plant of The Equitable Gas Company on the northside here at 8:43 a. m. today.

There was a deafening roar, a burst of flames and a cloud of smoke rising from the scene of the explosion as the tank let go.

Wild reports were circulated at first that hundreds were reported dead or dying as the entire lower northside was wrecked by the blast which spread death and destruction for miles.

Ambulances and fire apparatus fought their way through the crowds with great difficulty. A general call was sent out to every hospital in the city to rush all available physicians and ambulances.

It will be hours before anything like a reliable casualty list can be compiled, police said, because of the great extent of the explosion and resultant turmoil throughout the entire downtown district.

Buildings were leveled for two blocks. There was a mass of broken glass from the windows of office buildings in all downtown street within miles of the gas company plant.

Two street cars were lifted from the rails and turned completely around. The cars were loaded with passengers on their way to work. Northside residents were panic-stricken by what police described as probably the worst disaster in the city's history. Terrified men, women and children deserted their homes in fear, running through the streets as though mad.

Hospitals on the northside were soon filled with victims and it was necessary to commandeer all sorts of automobiles to rush the injured to hospitals in outlying districts.

A man on the second story of a lively stable two blocks from where the tank let go was catapulted through a window to the street. His scalp was cut and hands bruised.

Telephone and electric light and power service on the northside went out simultaneously, as the main wires, running near the plant, were blown to bits.

Coroner William J. McGreggor who rushed to the scene said half an hour after the blast that he was unable to even estimate the number of dead.

Nothing but a gaping hole was left on the site of the tank that exploded. Small buildings in the immediate vicinity were crushed.

At 10:30 a. m., police said, the feared loss of life would be a palling, though confusion was great at the scene of the disaster that they could not even approximate the death toll or number injured at this hour.

Likewise, the property loss remained undetermined, but police claimed it would exceed a million dollars.

At 10:30 a. m., U. S. weather observer, said the blast shook Oliver building, a mile and a half away, where the weather bureau is located. The blast occurred on the north side of the Allegheny River, near the point where it meets the Monongahela River to form the Ohio.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Dr. John Roach Straton, nationally prominent pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church here, had added twenty-five more "ailing persons" to his list of "the cured" today. Rev. Straton anoints the sick and crippled with oil in his reported "newly found power of healing."

Dr. Straton today altered his former announcement to the extent of admitting that oil anointments were cures-all. "We never advise anyone to turn from an earthly doctor and we cannot hope to give an immediate cure," he said.

On each of the sick, tubercular or crippled patients who went before him Sunday, Dr. Straton laid his oil-anointed hands, amid shouting of "hallelujah" and weeping. Several paralytics announced they were cured.

MINERS IN NEED

NELSONVILLE, O., Nov. 14.—Winter finds the wives and children of striking coal miners in real need and with insufficient food and clothing, according to reports from Hocking valley investigators. The miners' union is giving out what supplies they have been able to collect, it is reported.

JURY SELECTION IN WASHINGTON BOUND IN TECHNICALITIES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14—The honorable jury commission of the District of Columbia is in a quandary. Briefly, it wants to know how to go about getting a group of tallmen from which to draw the jury that is to sit in the retrial of the Teapot Dome conspiracy case.

Although ex-Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, the millionaire oil magnate, do not come up for retrial until January 16, the jury question already is worrying district authorities.

Aside from the usual difficulties which arise in picking a panel to try an important criminal case which has received wide publicity in any community, the district jury commissioners find their task complicated by innumerable special restrictions which are imposed upon them, by reason of extraordinary disqualifications attaching to jury service in the case.

Prospective jurors must first of meet the usual requirements of legal age, American citizenship, and residence within the district. They must be able to read and write, understand English, and they must not have a record of conviction of a crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, nor follow occupations which are exempted from jury service, including the legal and medical professions, the clergy, or be law enforcement officers or special officers.

But, because the United States government is a vitally interested party to the case, they must not be connected in any way with the government—and that automatically excludes possibly a third of the district's 480,000 population.

Then follows a long list of additional disqualifications which must be hurdled before the veniremen even get a chance to answer their names in court, and be examined by the opposing attorneys.

They must not have any pending contract with the United States government, nor the district, must not be holders of war risk insurance—which excludes practically every man who saw any kind of war service; nor have received any war bonus or be eligible for any pension; must be neither tenant or landlord of any government bureau or department; must not even own a store in which is located a branch postoffice or stamp agency, and must not receive pay or bonus from the government or the District of Columbia. The veniremen may not be members of the reserve army or naval forces, or notaries public.

Having passed all these barriers, the twelve men who take their places eventually in the jury box must not have formed any opinions from reading or hearing about the most widely discussed and published litigation in a decade, which has been before the Federal District, appellate and Supreme Courts almost constantly for four years.

Farm Notes

HONOR WHEAT CLUB

Eight new members will be added this year to the honor club of Ohio farmers who have produced more than forty bushels of wheat on each of at least ten acres. In addition to the eight new members, H. L. Longnecker, Whitehouse, Lucas County, has fulfilled the requirements for admission a second year. He became a member in 1926 when he produced 57.11 bushels an acre. This year he produced 55.29 bushels, the highest yield reported. The club now has twenty-six members.

The men whose names will be added to the roll this year are: Glenn Marshall, Dola, Hardin County, 47.54 bushels; Ira Marshall, Dola, Hardin County, 47.54 bushels; Wendell Baker, Urbana, Champaign County, 47.26 bushels; Clarence Slack, Trinway, Muskingum County, 46.7 bushels; Otto Miller, McClure, Henry County, 45.4 bushels;

MODERN YOUTHS ARE GIVEN CLEAN BILL

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14—Young people have just as much moral stamina and sense of what is right these days, as they ever had," according to Colonel George L. Converse, of Columbus, a former commandant of the Reserve Officers Training Corps at Ohio State University.

"There is nothing wrong with the modern youth," Colonel Converse maintained. "It is the great wealth and modern luxuries that cause people to decay the youth of today."

Colonel Converse who is a graduate of West Point and a famed military leader, was head of the military department at Ohio State for nineteen years, starting in 1909. When the colonel took command here there were 425 cadets enrolled in the R. O. T. C. At the present time more than 3700 are taking the course.

Twenty Years '07 - Ago - '27

A fine program has been arranged for the second annual reunion of the Knights of Pythias of Greene County at the Opera House, November 29. Mr. H. Wolfson, proprietor of the Xenia Dry Cleaning Co. has purchased the Neeld property on S. Detroit St.

Dr. Whinnery, of Yellow Springs, left for New York. The Mt. Zion Reformed Church is about to begin a lecture course of five numbers.

East High School, Xenia, was awarded a silver medal by the Jamestown Exposition on its exhibit of class room and industrial work.

R. G. Shannon, Tiffin, Seneca County, 43.13 bushels; W. C. Rosenberger, Tiffin, Seneca County, 41.31 bushels; M. C. Leslie, Bryan, Williams County, 40.28 bushels.

Of the nine growers who "made" the club this year, seven grew Trumbull wheat, a variety developed at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, and another grew Trumbull wheat, a variety developed at the experiment station. Both Trumbull and Fulvio are practically immune to loose rust.

Medals will be awarded to the new members of the wheat club at a joint banquet of the members of the several honor clubs sponsored by the extension service of Ohio State University, during the annual Farmers Week beginning January 30, 1928.

STATE OFFICIALS DEFINE RABBIT LAW

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14—In response to inquiries received by state officials here concerning the number of rabbits that may be possessed under Amended Section 1396 (B) of the General Code, hunters are advised that enforcement will be strictly in accordance with the language of the statute—"A person may take in one day and have in his possession at one time, not more than five hares or rabbits except as provided in the section, but no person shall catch, kill, injure or pursue with such intent a hare or rabbit, except from one hour before sunrise to one hour after sunset."

Attention is also directed to Section 1396 (A) "Hares and rabbits may be taken and possessed only from the fifteenth day of November to the first day of January, both inclusive, and such taking shall be done only with gun and dog, or with gun. The owner of lands or his tenants or bona fide employees, may take, except Sunday, and, in any number, hares, or rabbits which are found doing actual damage to grain, berries, fruit, vegetables, trees and shrubbery, the property of such owner.

ASPIRIN

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Bayer Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If it says Bayer, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it is not! Headaches are dispelled by Bayer Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Bayer—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Bayer Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germ.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CAR DERAILED

Partial derailment of one car of a Pennsylvania Railroad freight train at Oregonia, below Waynesville, at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon was reported to the assistant trainmaster's office of the line in Xenia. The local wrecking crew was sent to Oregonia and the main line was expected to be cleared in a short time.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. GOES SCHOOL WILL DEDICATE NEW LIGHTS, GIFT OF EX-PUPIL

Former pupils and former teachers of District No. 4 school at Goes Station, will attend a homecoming at the school November 18 when the new electric wiring and light installations donated by R. Hayes Hamilton, Xenia, former pupil, will be formally presented.

The Goes Community Club and county school officials are co-operating in the program and every one who has ever lived at Goes or attended school there, is invited to attend the affair. H. C. Aultman, county school superintendent, is sending formal invitations to all former teachers whose names are available and those not formally invited are requested to attend without formality.

J. F. Shoemaker, Goes store keeper, is assisting in arrangements for the program. Mr. Hamilton attended the school at Goes eight years, during his grade school years. After he created the Hamilton Travelogue lectures, which he delivered from coast to coast he found that attempts to give his illustrated lectures in the Goes school were handicapped because the school was not connected with electricity.

Mr. Hamilton then told board members that he would pay for the installation of lights and fixtures at the Dayton Power and Light Co., arranged to provide current to that community. The company installed a transformer in order to service residents last spring, and during the summer the building was wired and light fixtures installed at Mr. Hamilton's direction.

The tentative program arranged for the formal presentation program includes a reunion of former pupils and teachers at 7:30 p. m., November 18, and one minute speeches by former pupils and teachers. County Superintendent Aultman will introduce Mr. Hamilton who will make formal presentation of the new lights and the gift will be accepted by J. F. Shoemaker, on behalf of the board and patrons.

Using the new electric power, Mr. Hamilton will present one of his latest lectures, together with motion pictures taken in Bermuda, and a movie lecture of Henry Ford's model "little school" at Dearborn, Mich., and other appropriate pictures.

THE Y. M. C. A. AGAIN

Nov. 14, 1927.

Dear Editor:

Having read a letter in your paper, written by the sixth grade pupils of Spring Hill School, pleading to the different organizations and the business men of the city to help them to get the people of Xenia interested in getting a Y. M. C. A. and a Y. W. C. A. organized in our city, and as I am very much interested in the welfare of the children of Xenia, I hope and pray that the people of Xenia will not turn a deaf ear to the plea of these children.

Let us back them up, and give them a place where they can get clean constructive instructions that will make them women and men of Xenia will be proud of.

FORMER XENIAN IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

Word was received by Frank P. Smith, N. West St., Monday, of the death of Charles F. Harrison, 70, former well known Xenia plasterer, which occurred Saturday evening at the home of his daughter, at Naticopa, Calif.

Mr. Harrison left Xenia last spring to visit his daughters in California and his health began to fail shortly after arriving in the west. Death was caused by heart trouble.

Funeral services were held in Naticopa with burial in Glendale, Cal. Mr. Harrison leaves three daughters, Mrs. Harlan Hefel, Naticopa, Cal., Mrs. Charles Wilson, Glendale, Cal., and Mrs. Zella Airling, of Dayton, O. His wife died several years ago.

Members of Troop No. 41, Boy Scouts of America, are urgently requested to attend a meeting at the new Scout cabin Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Registration of Scouts for the coming year will be started. The registration fee is fifty cents and Scoutmaster R. H. Kingsbury hopes to have all troops re-registered as soon as possible.

RELATIVES IN XENIA RECEIVED A telegram Sunday announcing the death of Mrs. Mamie Vena, at her home in Los Angeles, Calif. Mrs. Vena, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, had returned to Los Angeles from Xenia last Tuesday. She had been in invalid for some time.

On the arrival of the body of Thomas Mack, 43, former Xenian, in this city, Saturday, it was learned that he had been murdered by his wife, Mrs. Phoebe Mack, during a family quarrel. He was struck over the head with a bottle. Funeral services were held here Saturday afternoon at 1:30.

Dr. John Peters of Youngstown, O., was the Sunday guest of his daughter, Miss Marcella Peters, who is a student at Wilberforce University. He was also a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Peters, E. Second St., and other relatives.

FLYING STRAIGHT UP

From time to time we hear of various projects connected with the building of an airplane that will rise vertically from the ground and will descend vertically and at controlled speed from the air.

Few have any doubt whatever that such a plane will be built. The only question involved concerns when it will be built.

Hundreds of inventors and engineers, the world around, are at work on this problem of the helicopter of hovering device. Several fairly successful machines have been launched, with great secrecy, and there is a widespread belief that the British army may even now have a helicopter that is almost at the practical stage.

The Curtiss company is now engaged in preliminary work on an airplane that is designed to rise vertically. This plane will have no motors for forward propulsion, but will merely climb and glide and climb and glide again. It will not make the distance across the continent so rapidly as the present type of plane but maybe it will be so much less liable to accident that there will be a demand for it, even though it pokes along at sixty to seventy miles an hour.

Of course somebody will have a plane soon that will rise and alight vertically, and also will go forward at high speed. While we await the appearance of this phenomenon, aviation is growing as no other transportation industry in the history of the world ever grew.

And here is a lesson for cities. The towns that get themselves adjusted to the new transportation first will have a tremendous advantage. In naming the features of a city containing the greatest promise for future commercial greatness, a perfect airport should be among the first.

A perfect airport, of course, should be close to the heart of the city. It should be large, and it can't be too large. It should offer every facility for airplane servicing, and it should be perfectly lighted.

The perfect airport should have a mooring mast for airplanes. There are very few of these mooring masts in North America now, and the inland city that puts one on its airport before its neighbors get around to the consideration of such a project will have a publicity asset that will be worth more than five hundred parades and four hundred booklets.

We're going to be flying straight up soon. Meantime, aviation will go ahead, and the wise city will adjust itself to flight. There are some excellent airports in this country now, but many more are needed. What American city, for instance, will be to the airplane industry what Detroit is to the automobile business? The lists are still open.

URGES GOODWILL

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, a few years ago looked upon as the captain of the Modernist host which was carrying on an attack against Fundamentalism, now declares that the whole controversy was a waste of time and that henceforth the two camps will view each other with the greatest goodwill.

Writing in "The New Age" under the title of "What Future Religion?" the man who on Sunday, May 21, 1922, preached his famous sermon, "Shall the Fundamentalists Win?" today says of the next few years, "There will almost surely be an era of good feeling so far as theological differences are concerned. The modernist-fundamentalist controversy has petered out. No problems have been solved by it, as is generally the case in such controversies. They are uniformly a lamentable waste of time and energy for all people concerned. After this recent outburst will come as usual an epoch during which both conservatives and liberals will recognize that whatever may be the truth about theology, good will is religion. There will, of course, be die-hards in both parties who will wish to keep up their vehemence. In general, however, alike the militant fundamentalist and the supercilious liberal will meet with scant sympathy from the Christian public."

Among other movements which the pastor of one of New York's richest churches believes the next few years will see most pronounced in our religious life are chiefly an increasing demand for unity among the dissevered branches of the church, an increasing disturbance of the Christian conscience as to our economic and international paganism and a renaissance of dignity and beauty in worship.

The Way of the World

BUNK OF BUSINESS

There is a great deal of bunk talked about business. We pretend business is good when it isn't. We fool nobody. We pretend business is bad when it is not bad. And we fool nobody. Of course business must be bad sometimes. It always has had periods of being bad and always will have. Those things come and go. For business to fluctuate is normal. We live in a normal country. Be thankful of that. And thank God we are strong enough in this country to stand the ebb and flow of the tide. Perhaps the business world needs more sense and less lung-mad psychology.

THINK FOR YOURSELF

Don't be too much impressed by what your neighbor is thinking and doing. Democracy doesn't mean that men shall be like bricks in a wall, all the same size, shape and color. Don't let anybody else make your opinions for you. Don't be standardized. The world is full of all kinds of standardization now. Be as near right about your opinions and your acts as you know how. Don't waste your time by looking over the wall into your neighbor's dooryard.

SATURATION

One of the ablest manufacturers in this country gives a sensible definition of the "saturation point." We are always hearing about the saturation point for motor cars and for other products. In reality there is no such thing. Of course there is, theoretically, but not practically. The saturation point for any given article will be reached when "everybody has one and none ever wears out."

The Daybook OF A New Yorker

By
Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. — On East Fourteenth street, sandwiched between burlesque shows, movie palaces and automat restaurants is Luchow's, a relic of pre-war New York. This was one of the most famous restaurants of its day, but its day was darkened by the heavy cloud of prohibition. Luchow's re-established the atmosphere of European beer gardens. Here came all the famous, to drink their foam-capped imitable draught, over their weighty exchange of thought. Here was the meeting place of renowned societies. Here was the spot in which beer was supreme and in which stronger liquors were abhorred. Here was the popular rendezvous of O. Henry, of De Pachmann, of Paderewski, of Anton Dvorak, and a multitude of other equally brilliant artistic lights.

But this Luchow's is no more. True, there is still a place by that name at the same place. But inside, there are only relics of the glorious past sedately eating vegetable dinners, instead of quaffing the foaming brew. There are only mournful waiters bearing dietetically correct food in place of the frothy flagons of old. There are only wistful ghosts to haunt the once brilliant meeting place of pre-Volstead New York.

Things cost more in New York and environs than in any place else in the country, I believe. My neighbor paid $2.50 for a birthday cake of simple design. In Chicago you can get a well trimmed one for sixty cents. We pay thirty-five cents for a small bottle of cream, which all through the middle west sells at just half the price. The best eggs now cost almost a dollar a dozen. That price, too, is double what they pay out in Illinois. I do not believe that New York salaries are proportionately higher, but the necessity of life certainly cost a lot in this part of the world.

There is a chauffeur for one of the Shuberts who always guesses almost the exact time at which his master will tire of an opening performance at a theatre and drives up to the entrance in the Rolls-Royce. That is the apotheosis of dramatic criticism.

There is a newsdealer in a suburb in Westchester who is an Englishman who has not been over here long enough to think in dollars, quarters, dimes, nickels and cents. He quotes the prices of wares at his stand—which includes chewing-gum, candy, cigars, magazines and stationery—in shillings and pence. I understand his plight. When I am abroad and the price of something is quoted to me, I can make nothing of it until I have gone through the mental arithmetic of reducing the price to terms in American money at the prevailing rate of exchange.

KELLYGRAMS

by Fred C. Kelly

Talkers and Listeners

My old friend, Julian K. Viles, for nearly 40 years conducted a fishing camp in the wilds of Maine—the only one I ever heard of when they guarantee the fishing. If you didn't catch all the speckled trout you wanted, and on the fly, there was no charge for your board. Naturally, Viles attracted guests from remote parts of the country.

"You must have picked up a lot of information from talking to all these smart business men who have some here during 40 years," I suggested to this old man of past three-score and ten, as we sat before some blazing logs. "The trouble is," he replied, "that the one who knows most have the least to say. They're busy just asking questions and trying to see what they can find out. The folks who don't know much—they do all the talking."

If anybody wants proof of that remark, let him look up almost any copy of the Congressional Record!

What a lot of things in everyday life we must make on faith! Yesterday I ate mushrooms in a strange hotel. The only assurance I had that there were no poisonous toadstools in them was the fact that the hotel appeared to be a well-conducted place, whose managers, doubtless, would take precautions against poisoning guests.

The milk and cream seemed good, and yet I know that many dairy barns are none too clean. I could only accept on faith that milk in this hotel was from a place where cows are treated as prima donnas.

When a man tells me that he takes nothing on faith but always has to be shown, I know that he is either a liar or a fool.

Last year the head of a big shoe factory tried to make various savings and reduce the total time required to manufacture each pair of shoes. Most of the foremen said this couldn't be done. They were working at high speed already.

"Well," suggested the big boss, "do you suppose we could clip off a second from the time a shoe is on each different machine?"

They made that one second saving their goal, and of course succeeded. Almost anybody can save a second, can't he?

The total number of seconds thus saved had a value, so I am assured, of nearly $100,000 a year!

ONE HUNTING SEASON THAT NEVER CLOSES

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Your Mirrors Mean Much to Your Beauty

Psychologists have found that attention is the first law of life and that every living organism grows like that to which it gives attention. This is of great importance to beauty. The flower that is "born to blush unseen and waste its fragrance on the desert air" is comparatively rare in human species. Beautiful surroundings, pleasant circumstances and an impersonal, unobtrusive knowledge of her own beauty attributes, add tenfold to a woman's charm.

You all know of cases in which a homely, sullen little girl was taken out of a drab orphanage into a lovely home, given pretty clothes and mirrors. She blossomed out into such beauty as no one believed she had. That is because her attention has been taken away from sordid, unattractive surroundings into a place where everything that strikes her consciousness is beauty.

But most of us live in a complex world where our attention is demanded by millions of things, some unlovely. The choice of what we allow to come into our consciousness, to influence our thought and looks, lies entirely with us. We are potentially anything, and the will is the burning glass that focuses our attention. The more concentrated that is, the swifter and more intensive the results. For instance, you can cook half-heartedly all your life, but if you wish to be a really good cook, you must give your undivided attention on books and you will become literary. And by the same token, direct it always toward beauty and you will be beautiful.

I am not telling you to do anything difficult when I advise you to give attention to your reflection in the mirror. Your own reflection naturally interests you more than anything else. Just try passing all the mirrors that cross your vision without looking into them. It is a definite effort to keep your eyes away.

Yet most women have a sort of repression that keeps them from giving their undivided attention to a mirror. They are self-conscious about seeing themselves, and they consciously avoid seeing their reflections except in the privacy of their own boudoirs or else take a stiff, formal pose before a mirror just as if they were greeting a stranger.

Your reflection should not be a stranger. It should be your warmest and most natural friend, as well as your severest critic. Frankly set out to study yourself in the mirror from every angle. Get a close-up of your skin to determine your complexion needs. Examine the very grain of your skin. See your whole figure at a distance to get an idea of line—your silhouette, your carriage, the "outline ensemble" of your appearance. That is the surest way to perfect poise, for the woman who knows she looks right is untroubled when she greets strangers by the petty worries about whether her skirt hangs well or whether she has put on the right shade of stockings.

Be sure of your profile view from every angle. It is every bit as important to your beauty as the front view. Move around in front of the mirror, sit down, stand up, walk; see yourself move as others see you. That is the way to get grace and co-ordination of movement, for what is practiced sufficiently becomes habit.

In my talks this week I am going to take up the various kinds of mirrors and what they can contribute to your beauty.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent.

Straight Into the Gap

At last Peter's curiosity got the better of him. What in the world was Mrs. Flittermouse making all that rumper about? He leaned forward as far as he dared and tapped the Bat on the tip of her pink ear.

"Is anything wrong?" asked the boy. "Tell me if you have sighted danger ahead. I had much rather know the worst that go on imagining all sorts of things as I have been doing ever since you started to give those cries. Why are you squealing so, anyhow?"

Mrs. Flittermouse impatiently twitched one wing, but she did stop chewing long enough to answer.

"Such a foolish question to ask at a time like this! Why do I squeal? I don't know, but I'll tell you one thing! No Bat ever went on a hunt who didn't! Why, you can't guess how exciting the sport is. This very minute my heart is flopping about like a Tumble-Bug, and all because I don't know what instant a foolish insect will fly straight into my trap."

"Your trap," echoed Peter.

Peter laughed.

Today's Recipes

Black Bean Soup—One pint beans, one small onion, one celery root, one tablespoon flour, two tablespoons butter, two hard-boiled eggs, one teaspoon salt, one saltspoon pepper, one-fourth saltspoon paprika, one lemon. Soak beans overnight, boil them with two quarts of water. Slice onion and fry it in the butter with the celery root. When beans are soft, rub through a strainer, add seasonings, flour and one tablespoon butter cooked together. If too thick, add more water. Serve with a slice of lemon and hard-boiled egg in each plate.

Salmon Salad—One can salmon, one bunch celery, six cold boiled potatoes, juice of one lemon, ten chopped English walnuts, salad dressing. Free the salmon of skin and bones, flake lightly. Chop the boiled potatoes, also celery. Mix with salad dressing, garnish top with chopped nuts and serve on lettuce.

Suggestions

Creaming Butter and Sugar
In cold weather it is often difficult to cream the butter and sugar for cake. Add one or two tablespoons of boiling water to the butter. If the butter remains separated from the water pour it off, or it will have to be deducted from the liquid allowance as given in the recipe.

Little Items of Importance
Clean clouded plate glass with alcohol.
Dampened ashes will clean steel knives.
Salt and vinegar will remove stains from tea cups.
Wax paper wrappings are nice for the hot iron instead of beeswax. Save them.

Cocoa Sponge Cake
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)

Three eggs, one cup sugar, four tablespoons cold water, one cup pastry flour, three tablespoons dry cocoa, one teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Beat eggs until light and foamy, beat sugar in gradually, and beat all until thick. Add cold water, then flour mixed with cocoa, baking powder and salt sifted twice. Beat mixture hard two or three minutes, add vanilla. Pour into very small greased muffin pans, filling two-thirds full. Bake in a moderate oven fifteen minutes.

Instead, having by this time quite finished her meal of moth, she again began to utter those shrill cries, darting now this way, now that, dipping, soaring, to the right, to the left, until Peter's eyes began to feel as though sand was being thrown into them, and if he hadn't known better he would have thought sharp needles were pricking his toes.

Behind The Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Secretary William M. Jardine again denies that he's going to resign—right away.

He says he intends to stay on the job through the next session of congress anyway, and it sounds probable. Putative father, as he is, of the compromise farm relief plan with which the administration hopes to satisfy the corn belt this coming winter, it would be a mean trick in him to quit now virtually repudiating the poor thing just at a time when it most needs the countenance of his recognition and his name.

What with the attempt to replace so vital an organ as its equalization fee by the doubtful substitution of a revolving fund, it's a sickly infant at best. Darn few vicissitudes would settle its hash for good.

However, if Secretary Jardine had known, two and a half years ago, some of the things he must know today, we're at liberty to wonder if ever he'd have been minister of agriculture at all.

Only a few days after he was sworn in, I had a talk with him. Br'er Jardine has a vein of poetry running through him. He said he was aware the farmers were up against it. Yet, he pointed out, they have their compensations. They live close to nature. The greenery all around 'em is their greenery. The snow-mown smells are their smells. The meadow-lark overhead is their lark. When it snows, in winter, it's their snow.

This kind of stuff, the newly-appointed secretary remarked, has a value that can't be reckoned in cash, and he intimated that he had an idea it might be possible to make the farmers see it and include it in their inventories.

I distinctly recall that I questioned this in my own mind. Even if the farmers did as the secretary recommended, I couldn't see how they were going to apply it on their mortgages.

Senators from some of the western states, like Nye and Frazier, Norris, Brookhart and Shipeard, have since told me that they couldn't solve this problem either, and now they say they're convinced the reason was that nobody could solve it—it was a puzzle with no answer at all.

Jardine simply was asked to perform the impossible, and he didn't perform it.

In a way, for an agriculturist who has spent nearly his whole life as a college professor, he's done pretty well. If his administration hasn't been a phenomenal success, neither has it been a calamitous failure. No critic denies that he has tried hard.

When he was appointed, two courses were open to him, in order to go down in history as the greatest man who ever held his portfolio.

1. Actually to make agriculture prosper like the green bay tree.
2. To play such slick politics that the farmers would acclaim him, regardless of concrete results. He certainly hasn't filled prescription No. 1, perhaps because it was beyond human power, under existing conditions. Not being anything of a politician, he hasn't filled prescription No. 2.

And yet, though there's been a persistent undercurrent of grumbling, nobody's demanding that he be brought out and shot at sunrise, which is saying quite a little, considering the corn belt's general frame of mind.

As Jardine's successors, ex-Senator Dixon of Montana, ex-Governor Carey of Wyoming and Secretary Hohler of the Kansas Board of Agriculture are chiefly suggested.

These are the identical names which were chiefly mentioned when Jardine went in.

The choice doesn't seem to be very wide.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Choosing a Husband

Can anyone but the girl herself settle the following question?

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl 30 years old. I have a friend that has been away all summer and he knows I have been going through another boy, but he says he still wants to marry me. I love him very dearly and he says the same about me. He is 36, has been an awful man to roam around, but says he is ready to settle if I am. Do you think he would make a good husband? He is a good worker. I go with a boy of 23. He has lots of money and a nice car. Everybody says I would be foolish to give him up for the other, but I can't say I really love him. How would I explain to either one, or should I quit both and try to forget?"

"WEARY AND WONDERING"

If you really "dearly love" the first one I cannot see why you hesitate. Generally—mind I don't say always—a woman is happier with a man who is older, rather than younger than she. I really think what is bothering you is what these friends of yours say. You'll have to be courageous, in case you decide to marry your first friend, and tell the boy you are going to be married.

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDA H. MCGLONE GIBSON

HUSBANDS

I sometimes think that the greatest failure that woman has made in all the years of her progress is in the running of her home.

She has made great success in other branches of business, but in the one great business in which just because she is born a woman she is supposed to be proficient she fails. With all her interest in domestic science and other home-keeping theories very few women keep their homes as do men their offices.

Not one household in a hundred is run on business principles. Accounts are not kept, nor any thought given to doing the mechanical work efficiently—rather the average woman seems to try and get along with spending all she is given in a kind of a hit or miss fashion with the sure knowledge that she will not have to give account of it to someone as does a man in his business.

That, perhaps, is the reason why housework is considered almost the lowest class of work in which a woman may engage. I have known very few girls or women who contracted to "do" housework that lived up to her contract. Housework should be just as honorable an occupation as nursing, and it is not nearly as hard.

Surely keeping a home clean and free from germs and the preparation of good food should carry with it just as much dignity as the caring for some poor body after germs or bad food had made one ill.

I have almost come to the conclusion that men could do better work in the home than women. At least, they would run it on business principles.

even the well-to-do, where a woman is chief executive.

Take a woman whose income only allows her the help of one person. Just how shall she arrange her work so that the wheels shall turn noiselessly?

There certainly should be found a way that this could be done. A man would solve this problem right off the bat. Many people will say that the very fact that the one maid or helper does not eat her meals with the family works against loyal service.

This seems to me to be silly, and if I were a maid I would feel as though my dignity was not all lost by having to wait on the table while the family ate. In fact, it would seem as though I would understand that as this was about the only time the family could all be together that of course they would want to be alone. I would know that waiting on table so that the mistress of the house or no one else would be jumping up and making things uncomfortable was perhaps the one most important part of my duties.

I believe, however, that as the house where a girl works is in reality her home, that she should have some place where she could receive company.

Of course all this is obviated if a girl comes in for so many hours a day and then less. This seems to me to be about the easiest solution. But if a woman is paid by the hour, then she should give good measure of work for that hour—and the time which she takes for her dawled over lunch must be taken out, as is the hour that is given to a man for his mid-day meal.

Memo: The very slipshod manner in which the woman at the head of the household rules her employes shows conclusively women have really made a failure of the efficient administration of the home.

Xenia Merchants Overwhelm Piqua Eleven 51-0

VISITORS FURNISH SMALL OPPOSITION TO LOCALS' ATTACK

Straight Foot Ball Wins For Improved Xenia Outfit

So strong offensively they piled up eight touchdowns, scoring in every period, and so strong defensively that the opposition failed to register as much as a single first down during the contest, a greatly improved Xenia Merchants football team overwhelmed the Battery E, 135th Infantry eleven from Piqua 51 to 0 Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

Xenia made ten first downs but a majority of the touchdowns were of the long range variety. The Merchants looked entirely different from the rather weak eleven which lost its opening encounter to the Dayton Buckinghams a week ago.

Merchants scored their first touchdown in the first two minutes of play. Smith returned Piqua's kickoff forty yards. Towles traveled around end for twenty more after which Holton clicked off twenty more and a touchdown around the opposite side of the line. Perrine's kick for extra point was blocked.

Piqua kicked off again and on the first play Smith ran off tackle for a fifty yards, placing the ball on Piqua's twenty. Towles registered a second touchdown on a twenty-yard run and a pass, Holton to Perrine, gained the extra point.

Xenia kicked but Piqua was weak offensively as defensively and punted shortly afterward. Merchants launched another march. A pass, Smith to Perrine, was completed for a fifty-yard gain. Two line plungers earned a first down and Smith then shot off tackle for thirty yards through the line and a third score. A pass for the extra point failed.

Xenia scored once in the second period on the first play after Piqua had kicked off. Smith staged the most spectacular run of the contest, crashing through the line and running seventy yards through a broken field for a touchdown.

The extra point was good. As the second half started, Xenia received and carried the ball to Piqua's forty. Merchants reeled off three first downs and finally Smith plunged through the line for ten yards and a score. Smith received a pass from Holton for extra point.

Piqua elected to receive but several line plays lost instead of gained ground and the visitors were forced to kick from behind their own goal line. The punt traveled to the Piqua thirty-yard mark and Towles returned it for a touchdown. The extra point was not made.

Xenia received and worked the ball to its own forty. The locals made four straight first downs and a pass, Smith to Perrine, was completed for a twenty-yard gain and another score. Yeakley's kick for extra point was wide.

A recovered fumble paved the way for the scoring of Xenia's final touchdown in the fourth period after an ancient play had been resurrected. Smith received a kickoff and punted immediately to Piqua's fifteen. The Piqua receiver fumbled and Fuller recovered for Xenia. Then Fuller, in two attempts, went across the line for the final score.

Xenia attempted eight forward passes. Six were incomplete but two were complete for a net gain of seventy yards. Piqua tossed three passes, but two were incomplete and the third was intercepted.

Xenia's eleven played as one unit and the backfield worked in machine-like fashion. The line also showed the effect of coaching by Paul Halder. Halder personally played a few minutes and was largely responsible for one of the scores. Bob Yeakley, former Xenia High School star, was in the line-up and played a fine game. "Bull Dog" Smith played a sensational

GREENE COUNTY HUNTERS READY FOR OPENING OF HUNT SEASON

Greene County hunters will take the field Tuesday with the prospect of being entitled to bag only five hares or rabbits in one day and with it unlawful to have more than that number in their possession at any one time, under terms of a new law enacted by the last General Assembly of Ohio.

Hares and rabbits may be taken and possessed from November 15 to January 1, 1928. Equipment of hunters must not exceed a gun or a gun and dog. The animals must be bought or sold during the rabbit season only.

Rabbits or hares must not be killed, injured or pursued earlier than one hour before sunrise or later than one hour after sunset, the law provides. Pheasants and Hungarian partridge may be hunted from November 15 to November 25, the open season lasting ten days. Two cock pheasants and six partridge is the bag limit for one day.

Hunters are required to have a license for hunting and trapping and all persons should obtain permission to hunt before entering upon the property of another person, it is warned by District Game Warden Karl Keller.

Land owners are urged by Warden Keller to grant desirable sportsmen the privilege of a day afield. Hunters are requested to respect the rights and property of the land owners.

The new law limiting the taking and possessing of hares and rabbits to five per day is a conservation law as this number is considered sufficient for the average family.

"It is not the hunter who can kill the greatest number of game but rather the sportsman who gets the greatest thrill with the lesser kill of game," Keller declares.

Game protectors will be aided during the open season to see that the law is strictly adhered to. It is advised that the taking of rabbits with traps will not be permitted.

Mr. Keller asks that any violations of the law be reported to the attention of the nearest game protector.

Puts You in on the Ground
Floor of a Real Smoke Treat

Buffaloes are bringing joy nowadays. Real smoke enjoyment! For all you need is a nickel to get more downright smoking pleasure than was ever bought before at anywhere near the price. All you need to get a real Havana Ribbon cigar—fresh and mellow from the box—is five cents!

You've heard a lot about 5c cigars that are "really worth more." But here's one that actually sold at more—and sold big—for years. Sheer popularity and volume sales, alone, have made possible this new low price of a nickel. Havana Ribbon is a real smoke. The kind you pick regardless of price! Just packed with mellow fragrance and satisfaction—made of ripe tobacco. Now—5c!

But, after all, a smoke's the thing that counts. Try Havana Ribbon. Drop in at a nearby cigar store and invest a lucky nickel. You won't be disappointed.

Diet and Health
By Lulu Hunt Peters M.D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

My Dear Followers: When sending for material which we offer you, please remember to enclose a STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose TEN cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, NOT OVER 200 WORDS, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Don't forget the STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE if you expect me to send you this information I have offered. — Lulu Hunt Peters.

Leopardy Skins
While you know the leopard cannot change its spots, many of you have hopes of changing yours, evidently, from the numerous requests I receive asking me to write on how to get rid of dark and white spots on the skin. So today I am going to write on both of them.

The dark spots are known as Chloasma, and the white spots as Vitiligo, or Leucoderma (leuco, white; derma, skin). I'll take up chloasma first.

CHLOASMA is a term applied to increased pigmentation of the skin. It occurs as variously shaped and sized spots of a yellowish or brownish or blackish color. There is no elevation of the skin and the surface usually remains smooth. The spots generally shade off gradually into the normal surrounding skin.

The face is usually the site for the common variety, although the spots may be found occasionally on the trunk and other parts.

Cause: Chloasma spots may be caused by a yellowish or brownish or blackish color. There is no elevation of the skin and the surface usually remains smooth. The spots generally shade off gradually into the normal surrounding skin.

The type Chloasma Uterian is that due to some functional or organic change in the uterus (womb) and is most often seen during pregnancy (but it may occur in diseases of this organ). It is most frequently seen on the forehead, but sometimes on the neck and occasionally on other parts of the body. It usually disappears after confinement.

Treatment: This has to be directed towards the cause. Still, wagon states that the discoloration sometimes can be removed by local applications, and when it is impossible to discover any disturbance as the cause, then reliance is to be placed upon local treatment.

The local treatment consists of the application of remedies that will peel the skin. They must be applied by a skillful skin specialist. Lemon juice and peroxide of hydrogen can be home tried.

Vitiligo or Leucoderma. The white spots that come on the body are the opposite to "liver spots" or chloasma, in that instead of having extra amounts of pigment or coloring matter, they have no pigment at all in them. (Sometimes, around the edges of the white spots there will be more pigment than normal.) The size of the patches vary from that of a ten-cent piece to immense areas involving nearly the whole body. The general health does not seem to be affected and there seems to be no change in the sensibility of the skin on the spots, except an unusual sensitiveness to the sun's rays. If these spots are on the scalp or other hairy regions, the hair turns white.

The medical text books say the cause of the disease is not known. It may be due to a disturbance of the internal secretory or ductless glands, or it may be due to a disturbance of the nervous supply to the part. Not knowing the cause of them, the treatment is also unsatisfactory. Sometimes physicians use the glandular products for medication.

I suggest you have a thorough physical examination for both of these conditions. Of course, all the suggestions I give in the column regarding balanced diet, exercise and prevention of constipation, etc., should be practiced. We have articles on both these subjects which you may have by sending a fully self addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Next: Duodenal and Stomach Ulcers.

NOTE: Please send in stamped, addressed envelope with requests for answers.

EXPLAINS NEED OF CHRIST AT CHURCH

The Rev. W. H. Tilford, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, answered the question "Are we in need of Christ?" at the second of the series of services on the Gospel of Mark, at the Reformed Church, Sunday night.

The message was based on Christ's statement that "they that are whole have no need of a physician, but they that are sick, I came not to call the righteous but sinners." The speaker gave the setting of the passage in the Book and its meaning, deducting Christ's interpretation, that he was a physician and that sin was a deadly disease to be cured by Jesus alone. A chart of "spiritual diseases" was used in the discussion.

In the closing part of the discussion, the Rev. Mr. Tilford argued the point that every one was in need of Christ and that Christ reached everyone in His cure of sin, if he would come to Him believing.

The Rev. D. A. Sellers presided and will preach next Sunday evening at the Presbyterian Church on "Are we serving Christ?"

The Reformed Church orchestra played four numbers during the service.

TWO LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE-LAD-TWO LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE-

Money Love
By BEATRICE BURTON Author of "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "HONEY LOU," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

READ THIS FIRST: LILY LEXINGTON is the spoiled only daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, who have always lived beyond their means. Her mother's fondest dreams are realized when she becomes engaged to STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor much older than herself. On the day after he proposes she goes downtown to meet her chum, SUE CAIN, and sees a man watching her through the crowd. She is oddly attracted by him before she sees that he is wearing a taxi-driver's uniform. Moved by a sudden impulse, she jumps into the cab and he drives her home. Their friendship begins that day. Every day after that she goes downtown to see him and learns that he owns his own cab in a company of which his friend, ROY JETTERSON, is head. He intends to sell the cab to raise money to finance a piston ring invention of his, he tells her. Lily realizes that she is in love with him. But about the time she makes up her mind to break off her engagement to Staley, her mother proudly announces it and the wedding day is set for early in June.

Mrs. Lexington hires a new chauffeur and when he comes he is Pat France, whom Lily was trying to forget! She goes for a drive with him, and thrilled by seeing him again, tells him how much she cares for him. That night she leaves a card game at Staley's house to go for a drive with Pat, pretending she has a headache. Pat takes her home and Staley telephones to see if she arrived there safely. He is suspicious of Lily's friendship with her chauffeur, having seen them together once in Pat's cab. Lily asks CARRIE, the maid to talk to Staley.

Sue Cain warns Lily that Staley won't stand for her traipsing around with Pat as she has been doing, but Lily makes up her mind that nothing really matters to her but Pat, anyway, and wonders how in the world she is going to marry Staley in three weeks.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XIII

The next morning Lily did an unheard-of thing-for her. She got up at seven o'clock.

She bathed, brushed her bright hair, until it shone like spun copper, powdered and painted her face with the greatest care and slipped into a brand-new sports outfit that she had bought for her honeymoon.

A cunning sly thing of sea-shell pink bound with white beads. Two or three times, while she was dressing, she tiptoed out into the hall to look out of the back window and see if Pat was up.

The last time she went, she saw him. He was flat on his back on the driveway, doing something to his hair and lay her cheek close to his, and she saw his eyes were closed.

She had never felt that way about a man before. Never.

She could hardly wait to finish dressing. She pulled on her slippers, gave one last look at herself in the mirror and hurried down the back stairs.

The back stairs opened into the kitchen. And as Lily opened the door at the top of the stairs, a sizzling of frying eggs and sizzling of ham came up to her.

She heard Carrie's voice: "Sit right down, Pat. The morning paper's there on the table, and your cigarettes beside them. . . . And how do you like your coffee? Weak or strong enough to float a battleship?"

Lily went on down into the kitchen. Care stood at the stove, getting breakfast for two. There were two plates warming in the hot closet. The coffee tray on the kitchen table had two cups and saucers, two spoons, two tiny pitchers of cream upon it.

And on the screened porch beyond the kitchen the table was set for two! In the center of it stood a little glass vase of flowers, and a white cloth with a shining white linen cloth! The "help's" tablecloths were always colored ones in the Lexingtons' household.

"Coffee for two, eh, Carrie?" Lily asked, her voice sharp with sarcasm.

Carrie started, turned around and flushed. Lily saw that she had "crimped" her hair for this early morning occasion, had put talcum powder on her nose, and a large lace collar around the neck of her uniform. She looked as pretty as a peach.

"Just let mother catch her wearing that collar to work!" thought Lily. "And just let her find the best table linen out on that porch table!"

"I was just getting the new chauffeur a bite to eat," explained Carrie, getting pinker and pinker. "I thought I'd sit down with him, just to be sociable. Aggie went home last night and ain't back yet, so there's just the two of us this morning. I beat up a little biscuit."

Guiltily she opened the oven door and took out a pan of golden-brown Parker House rolls. She covered them with a clean tea-towel and set them in the hot-closet.

"Pat won't have time for breakfast, so you needn't go to all these elaborate preparations," Lily told her slyly. "I'm going to a picnic, and he's going to drive me right away. Where's that picnic hamper of ours, Carrie? I want you to pack it for me right away. . . . I'll take those rolls along, and we can fill a thermos bottle with the coffee and boil some eggs."

On the top shelf in the pantry were dozens of cans—smoked salmon, baked beans in tomato sauce, sardines, dill pickles, pearl onions, ripe olives, spaghetti.

While Carrie was boiling the eggs and pouring the coffee into the thermos bottle, Lily stood on a chair and dropped tinned beans and olives and sardines into the picnic basket.

At seven forty-five she appeared before Pat in the backyard, holding it in her arms. She beamed at him, smiling because it was May and sunny and the day was before them.

"We're going to have a picnic," she said, and all her happiness was in the tones of her light voice. "Just you and I. . . . Here, take this basket and put it in the back of the car. I'm going to ride up in front with you."

He shook his head, his arms hanging at his sides. "We can't do it—you know we can't," he said quietly. "It's hopeless—and I'm going to quit my job here at the end of the week. I heard your Dad and Mother talking last night in the car when I brought them home—Gosh! They look upon this Drummond guy as their son already. Why, you're as good as married now."

"Don't you stand there and tell me what I am! You put this basket in the car and we'll get out in the country some place where we can talk—I'm a long way from being married to Staley Drummond, so just write that on your cuff, Mr. Taxicab!"

He shook his head again, stubbornly.

"You do as I tell you," Lily told him at a shout. She stamped her foot on the cement of the driveway.

Carrie came out upon the back porch and pretended to be shaking crumbs out of a tablecloth that had no crumbs in it.

Lily knew she was listening. "Please let's go, Pat," she begged and put the heavy basket into the car herself. She slammed the door up to it. "You don't want Carrie to hear every word we say, do you? Come on, hop in and show me some speed. Let's see if we can find a babbling brook by eight o'clock!"

"We shouldn't do it, you know," Pat said, but while he spoke he was getting into the car. Lily jumped in from the other side and they started.

"Carrie will probably run right upstairs and tell Mother that I've eloped with the chauffeur," she laughed as they rushed through the cool morning air that was sweet with the fragrance of lilacs and little new green leaves and young grass.

It seemed to blow all her troubles away, and for a minute she forgot Staley Drummond and the engraved wedding invitations that the stationer had delivered at the house yesterday, and the white satin wedding dress and the lace veil with its coronet of waxen orange blossoms all ready for the tenth of June. She forgot her mother and Sue Cain and the diamond engagement ring that she had left lying on the top of her dressing table. . . .

"Well, here we are, Pat! Just you and I—and isn't it heavenly!" she sighed, and laid her cheek down against his sleeve.

Pat made a short grunting sound in his throat and shrugged one broad shoulder. "I don't know whether it's heavenly or not," said he. "Your friend, Drummond, is going to be pretty sore when he stops at your house this morning and finds that you've gone on a picnic trip with your chauffeur."

Lily didn't care. "I'll have this one day, anyway," she made up her mind. "And suppose Staley does stop at the house and find me gone? I can think up some kind of alibi to square things with him."

She giggled. "Carrie was certainly fixing you up for a banquet this morning when I stopped her," she said. "Flowers on the table and the best silver, and a dish of bar-le-due—Jimmie's crickets, but it was funny. I never thought I'd have Carrie for a rival!" She stopped short at the grim half-angry look that crossed the face as close to hers.

"Yes, that's just it! You and I don't belong in the same class," he said gravely. "I belong to the class that works hard for its living, and you're at the top of the pack!—We're as far apart as the two poles, you and I."

"It's your fault if we are, Pat. I want to be the best friend you have anywhere. But you keep pushing me away. . . . You keep telling me that I ought to be true to Staley Drummond when I don't want to be. I don't want anybody but you, Pat!—Ever!" She was swept off her feet by her feeling for him, in that moment.

"Ever since the first day I saw you, I've been chasing you, haven't I, Pat France? I've made a fool of myself—and I'm not through making a fool of myself. Pat, I want to marry you—now, today, before I can change my mind."

He did not answer.

But he slowed down the car, turned it in the road, and started back towards town.

"You've been talking me home," asked Lily, and she shook his head.

"I want to show you something," he told her. "Better get into the back seat, hadn't you? You might pass Drummond or your friend, Miss Cain, or someone like that on the road—and it would look better for you to be back there where you belong."

"I'll stay right here," said Lily, her soft chin set firmly.

She sat quietly in her corner of the seat while they went back over the familiar ways to her own house. They swept past it, and on into town.

Through the business section they went to a humble section beyond the A & B railroad tracks—a section of little low houses with untidy backyards, narrow sidewalks with children playing on them even at this early hour, and four-o'clock hedges—a neat clean little neighborhood of people who were not too poor and certainly not too rich. A neighborhood of the finest class in the world—the lower middle-class. The back-bone of this great country of middle-class people.

The car turned into a little narrow street.

"This is where I live," said Pat. "In the next house."

The house was a low white one with dark brown shutters. The morning sun shone in its front windows so that it seemed to twinkle and wink from behind its neat white fence.

There were brown rocking chairs on the front porch, and big pots of begonias and scarlet geraniums. The curtains in the windows were crisp white dotted-muslin ones, and a white cat was curled up on one window ledge.

"Would you live in a house like that?" asked Pat. "And do every lick of work in it, yourself?"

A COURTEOUS BANDIT

CHICAGO, Ill.—A young couple, Miss Mable Helger and Frank Detloff, were held up by a bandit. "I beg your pardon, but I must have your valuables," said the bandit. He took Miss Helger's fur coat and rings and $48 from Detloff. After taking $20 from the girl's purse the bandit thanked them most courteously and disappeared.

The Theater

Basil Sidney, who enacted "Hamlet" in modern clothes first for Manhattan, is now presenting "The Taming of the Shrew," in the trimmest of modern apparel. Mary Ellis has the part of the shrew who is overcome by the bigness, beauty and brutality of the leading man.

These principals are said to be supported by an excellent cast, and the audience relishes Shakespeare presented with the aid of a carpet sweeper, short skirts, silk hats, goggles, radio, electric heater, revolver shots, an automobile, and a flashlight photo.

Glen Hunter, whose acting in "Young Woodley" made stage history, stars in "Behold This Dreamer," now on Broadway. It is a tale of a man sent to an insane asylum to find happiness. The title is taken from Genesis 37, 5. He did not love his wife, hated the business of his father-in-law, the manufacture of brushes, and was committed to the asylum. While incarcerated, he painted a masterpiece, was taken home and returns to the asylum, where he could only be happy. Patricia O'Hearn is said to be very good as his wife.

While in Paris buying a wardrobe, Tallulah Bankhead, American actress, was suddenly succeeded in her part in "The Garden of Eden" (a recent Manhattan failure) by Miss Wilford, New Zealand actress, previously unknown. The London audience enthusiastically welcomed the new actress, and Miss Bankhead is ill in Paris as the result of the disclosure.

Bayard Veiller, playwright, tore up the dramatization of "Elmer Gantry" last week, fearing he might offend the clergy, with the consequence that that body would turn on his present prosperous play, "The Trial of May Dugan."

"Quality Street" the Barrie mas-

Elsie Janis, stage star, is starting on a tour of the world and may be forced to leave the stage due to the loss of her voice in Los Angeles musical comedy.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged, and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps to neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean. A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble. Adv.

EAGLES HEAR STATE SPEAKER; INITIATE 17 NEW CANDIDATES

Organization work of the fraternity was discussed by Adolph A. Miller, Columbus, noted surgeon, and lecturer for the state organization department of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in an address before members of Xenia Aerie, No. 1689 at initiatory exercises Sunday afternoon at the Aerie hall.

Seventeen candidates comprising the Armistice Day and Twentieth Anniversary classes, and constituting one of the largest initiations in the Aerie's history, were taken into the order at the meeting. The speaker said in part:

"Every organization must have a good reason for being, or it cannot long exist. The Fraternal Order of Eagles was first started in Seattle, Wash., twenty-three years ago, as a society of mutual aid and fellowship among a few people of congenial tastes and similar occupation. Within the twenty-three years it has grown to an organization of more than 500,000 members, who, with their families, make it a fraternity embracing two and one-half million souls.

This great fraternity is getting in readiness for an active part to bring about the enactment of an Old Age Pension Law in the state of Ohio, a law that is being sponsored by the Fraternal Order of Eagles for the benefit of humanity."

Following the exercises an elaborate banquet was served by the members of the program committee, consisting of Paul Richford, Andrew George, Alva Sheeley and James Lynch.

Plans were formulated at the meeting for a drive for the "Dr. Frank M. Chambliss Class" to be initiated Sunday, December 11. This class will be in honor of the Aerie physician.

Aerie members were particularly interested in signing new applicants for the Armistice Day class due to the fact the local Aerie sent the largest percentage of its members to the army during the World War of any Aerie in the United States.

SUPREME PRELATE TO ADDRESS LODGE MEMBERS THURSDAY

Members of Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 56, K. of P. and Triumph Temple, No. 467, Pythian Sisters, will open their social season, Thursday evening, November 17, at Knights of Pythias Lodge Hall, Detroit and Second sts., Xenia, at 7:30 p. m., by presenting the Rev. Frederick S. Attwood, supreme prelate, Knights of Pythias of the World, who will deliver his famous lecture, "Am I My Brother's Keeper."

The Rev. Mr. Attwood is a noted speaker and orator and appeared in Xenia two years ago. He travels over the country for speaking engagements, although totally blind. Trinity Orchestra will furnish music preceding the lecture, interspersed with songs and readings. The service is not for Knights only, it is announced, but for the entire public, free.

The Rev. Mr. Attwood will address the Central High students at the Jean B. Elwell Auditorium, Thursday at 2 p. m.

Vernon Hampton, W. C. Bloom and Jacob Kany, compose the committee in charge of the K. of P. meeting.

"SICK-HEADACHES?"

Torturing, maddening! Most always trace them to a lazy liver, constipation and a sour-lick stomach. Poison of fermented foods retained, instead of passing, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissues, it causes congestion and that acute, sickening pain.

Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills quickly and surely remove the cause by stimulating the liver, toning up the bowels, nerves, making the poison fermenta move on and out, thus purifying the blood and curing the headaches. The effect is almost instantaneous.

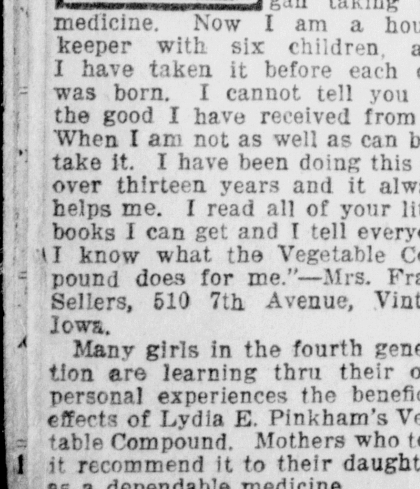

Women, because of their sensitive organism are especially prone to periodical headaches, should not suffer if a drugstore is nearby—for Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills have helped millions during the past 25 years. Non-secret formula, small, sweet, prompt and "Better Than Castor Oil." Two sizes 15c-30c.

GIRLHOOD TO MOTHERHOOD

Iowa Woman Found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Always Helpful

Vinton, Iowa.—"When I was seventeen years old I had to stay at home from school. I finally had to quit school, I was so weak. I suffered for about two years before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then I picked up one of your books and read it. I began taking the medicine. Now I am a housekeeper with six children and I have taken it before each one was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. When I am not as well as can be I take it. I have been doing this for over thirteen years and it always helps me. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."—Mrs. Frank Sellers, 510 7th Avenue, Vinton, Iowa.

Many girls in the fourth generation are learning from their own personal experiences the beneficial effects of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mothers who took it recommend it to their daughters as a dependable medicine.

MRS. BERT WINTER CLAIMED BY DEATH

Mrs. Martha McClellan Winter, 65, wife of Bert J. Winter, passed away at her home, 703 W. Main St., Monday morning about 1:30 o'clock. She had been in failing health since August and death was caused by heart trouble and complications.

Mrs. Winter was born on a farm west of Xenia, the daughter of David and Melvina McClellan. She spent her entire life in Greene County and has lived in Xenia for a number of years. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church and was an active member of the Ladies Aid Society and the missionary organizations. Mr. and Mrs. Winter would have been married forty-one years December 22. Besides her husband, Mrs. Winter leaves one son, Erskine Winter, this city; four sisters, Mrs. Cynthia Ginn and the Misses Emma, Zetta and Margaret McClellan and two brothers, John McClellan, Washington, D. C. and Frank McClellan, Xenia.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with burial in Woodland Cemetery.

GRANGE MEMBERS TO ATTEND SESSIONS

A number of members of Greene County Pomona Grange will attend sessions of the state and national Grange meeting in Cleveland this week. The state convention will begin Tuesday and the national sessions Wednesday, to continue the remainder of the week.

Nineteen Greene Countians will take the seventh degree, the highest degree in the order, during the meeting. About 8,000 candidates are expected to take this degree.

Among those attending from this county will be: S. H. Shawhan, county deputy and Mrs. Shawhan, county juvenile deputy; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mason, Caesar Creek; and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Meredith, Miami Grange, delegates. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mendenhall, Spring Valley Grange; Raymond Middleton and son, and Albert Jones of Caesar Creek; the Cosler family, from Charity Grange, Miss Anna Cook, William Baker and J. L. Stevenson, Miami Grange; Miss Lois Hutchison, Xenia Grange and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shade, Fairfield Valley Grange.

INDIGESTION WILL SPOIL YOUR LIFE

How to End Stomach Troubles Although indigestion may not be chronic with many people it is surprising how even slight pains or feelings of fullness after eating steal much of life's sparkle and happiness. Perhaps you scarcely notice it in the early stages, but remember indigestion never cures itself and usually gets worse. Be on your guard then.

The safest, surest and easiest way to end indigestion, heartburn or flatulence is to take a little "Pape's Diapiesin" after meals or whenever pain is felt. This quickly stops your discomfort by neutralizing excess stomach acid and preventing fermentation, and at the same time soothes, heals and strengthens your delicate stomach lining.

Get a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapiesin" today—every drugist sells and recommends it, as a sure remedy for stomach troubles. Don't let indigestion spoil your life—you can't have stomach troubles and "Pape's Diapiesin" too! —Adv.

Zimmerman News

The Community Club and women of the church cleared $68.73 on the lunch served at the G. A. List sale November 2, same to be divided equally between Club and Building fund. Things sold well at the sale which amounted to $5,754.

Rev. Eidemiller had charge of the funeral service at the church at Zimmerman, for Alfred Lewis, 8, who died from the effects of an automobile accident on Xenia Pike near his home. Music by Mrs. Homer Koogler and Mrs. Fred Smart. Pallbearers were four schoolmates, Elden Smart, Clayton Blake, Orville Hanes, Raymond Huston. Interment at Beaver Cemetery. Beautiful flowers were given by different organizations and others. Surviving are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Vernie Lewis, three brothers, Ralph, 12, Donald, 5, Horace, 3; one sister, Elizabeth, 10 and two half brothers and a half sister. The family is deeply appreciative and grateful for the generosity, sympathy and assistance given by friends, neighbors and various organizations, in its sad bereavement.

Rev. and Mrs. Eidemiller motored of Springfield, Ill., and visited relatives there. Mrs. A. D. Wenrick and son, Ralph, attended special services at the New Carlisle Church of the Brethren, recently.

Mrs. Nettie Moler spent two weeks at the home of her sister, Mrs. Charles Wright, at Beavertown.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bare entertained members of Faithful Workers' S. S. Classes, and friends at their home at Belmont. Thirty-five persons were present. Quite a number came enmasque which afforded much amusement, the costumes of the following being especially interesting and mirth-provoking: Mrs. Andrus Belt, as an elderly itinerant pedlar; H. C. Havens as an Old-Order Dunkard woman. Refreshments were served by the hostess. Regular November meeting will be held at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Eidemiller November 17.

Quite a number of visitors from other neighborhoods attended services Saturday morning, afternoon and evening and Sunday morning at the church of the Brethren on Xenia Pike, November 5 and 6.

Visiting preachers were Rev. L. A. Bookwalter, Trotwood; Rev. Walter Hawke and Glen Weimer, New Carlisle; Rev. Van Wright, Dayton; C. G. Erbaugh, Middletown; H. M. Coppock, Tippicanoe City; J. B. Gump, New Carlisle. Other visitors include Guy Studebaker and family; John Musseiman and family; Homer Bowers and family; Mrs. Ora Dredge, Mrs. George Yoder, Mrs. Judd, Mrs. Howard Kneisler, all of New Carlisle; Henry Drescher and family; Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Brunk, all of Springfield; Monroe Snyder and family of Dayton; Mrs. Yost Snyder, Charles Johnson and family of Dayton; Jack Young, wife and baby of near Yellow Springs; Amos Routzahn and family of near Middletown; Miss Harriett Weller of Spring Valley, who was a guest of Miss Ada Hanes; Miss Clara Woodman, Dayton; Mrs. Emma Coy, Mrs. Ray Randall, of Dayton and many others.

A pleasant surprise was tendered Mrs. W. J. Engle at her home on Dayton and Xenia Pike, November 5, 1927, when a large group of relatives and friends gathered there bringing baskets of delicious "eats" which were served at noon in cafeteria style. Present were: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Engle Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Stafford and daughter, Betty; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stafford and son, Robert; Mrs. Jennie Kable, Mrs. Peters and Etta Hawker, all of Dayton; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stafford and son, James, of Anna, O.; Mrs. Martin Schmidt, of Xenia; Mrs. Dan Jones and daughter, Helen; Mrs. Hower Cosler and children, Louise and Kenneth; Misses Emma, Martha and Kathryn Merrick; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Engle and children, Miriam and Marvin; Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Short, Mrs. Sarah E. Kable; Mrs. Harry Steadman and daughters, Priscilla, Gwendolyn and Wilhelm; Mr. and Mrs. Stafford and sons, Paul and Henry.

C. L. Coy had his left hand badly injured when caught in a corn husker Wednesday afternoon at his home on Xenia Pike. The fingers were crushed and an operation to amputate a portion of the hand was performed at Miami Valley Hospital, where he was taken immediately following the accident, by his brother Dr. Marcelus Coy of Dayton.

Misses Mary Coy, Mary Ferguson and Geneva Hawker were recent week-end visitors with their parents. Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Coy accompanied them back to Manchester College by motor.

EIGHT PERISH IN APARTMENT HOTEL FIRE HUNDREDS REPORTED KILLED OR INJURED; NORTHSIDE WRECKED

BLAZE IN ELEVATOR SHAFT BARS ESCAPE OF TRAPPED PEOPLE

Indianapolis Coroner
Finds Fire Escape
Next To Elevator

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 14.—Coroner Keever will open his inquest today into the deaths of eight persons who lost their lives in a fire which destroyed a three-story apartment hotel here early Sunday morning. Twelve others, who were badly injured, are being treated at local hospitals.

Following an examination of the ruins, Coroner Keever said the victims had been trapped "without a chance for their lives." He said the building's only fire escape was next to an elevator shaft through which the flames shot up.

Those who died were, Stella Kimberling, Alice Furr, Leroy Zimmerman, Elizabeth Busse, Erna Russell, Ruth Rowling, Mrs. Jessie P. Campbell and an unidentified woman.

BATAVIA, O., Nov. 14.—Four people, all members of one family, who perished in a fire which destroyed their home at Williamsport Saturday, are to be buried in one coffin at Mt. Orab, near here this afternoon.

Mrs. Maggie Darlington, 23, died Sunday morning of burns she received from an explosion which occurred when she attempted to light a fire in a cookstove, at her home, with kerosene, Saturday morning. Her husband, Jesse Darlington, 25, lifted her through a window, but he and his mother, Mrs. Nancy Darlington, 55, and his seven-month-old son, Joseph William, were trapped and burned to death in the house.

CAMPUS RESEMBLED HOUSE OF DAVID

FINDLAY, O., Nov. 14.—Members of the Findlay College "Pep" squad who resolved not to shake until the Findlay gladders won a football game have abandoned their stand. When persistent rumors that two of the Orange Line men and their captain, a backfield star, would not be in the games with Toledo and Adrian colleges, were confirmed by a formal announcement, hopes for a victory this season were abandoned.

GIRL MISTAKEN FOR BURGLAR IS KILLED

VALPARAISO, Ind., Nov. 14.—Inquest will be held today into the death of Miss Mildred Gratton, 17, who was shot and killed by her girl friend's father early yesterday when he mistook her for a burglar. Returning late from a dance, the girl found herself locked out at home. So she went to the home of Viola Thayer, her friend. She was climbing through a window when Viola's father saw her and fired, thinking she was a burglar.

CANTON PICKED

CANTON, O., Nov. 14.—The General Motors Corporation has selected Canton as sales and service headquarters for the Delco Light Company, one of its subsidiaries, it was learned here today. Headquarters are to be moved here from Cleveland and will become the distributing point for eighteen counties of northeastern Ohio. Two other branches are at Columbus and Dayton. E. A. Parry, formerly of the Dayton branch, will have charge here, it was said.

HAS CHAMP EWE

CHARDON, O., Nov. 14.—E. L. Young of Chardon claims to have the champion shropshire ewe of Ohio and possibly the United States.

In six years she has given birth to sixteen lambs. Two years she had triplets, three years twins and last March gave birth to twins, repeating with twins on October 22.

PUT AWAY POTATOES
CHARDON, O., Nov. 12.—John H. Bess, of Burton, ate four pounds and six ounces of mashed potatoes in fifteen minutes at Burton at the annual potato show and is eligible to compete in the northeastern Ohio show to be held in Cleveland.

A Mayor at Last

L. Ert Slack, Democrat and unsuccessful contender for the United States senatorial nomination, is serving as mayor of Indianapolis after a hectic period during which several persons claimed the mayoralty. Slack was elected by city council.

HENRY SANBORN, 81, ENDS LIFE SUNDAY WITH PISTOL SHOT

Loneliness Blamed By Friends For Suicide
Of Aged Xenian

Henry P. Sanborn, 81, well-to-do retired business man, ended his life in the bedroom of his home on Rogers St., sometime between 5:30 and 6 o'clock Sunday morning by shooting himself in the right temple.

The body, clad in underwear, was discovered by L. G. McCoy, about 5 o'clock when he went to Mr. Sanborn's bedroom to call him. Mr. and Mrs. McCoy had been making their home with Mr. Sanborn two months, but are said to have been planning to move.

McCoy summoned Dr. F. M. Chambliss, coroner, who investigated and believes death took place instantly. Circumstances indicated that the aged man had planned his suicide carefully. Accustomed to arise at 5 o'clock, it is believed he arose at the usual time, pulled down the window blinds, and placed a comfort under the rocking chair in which he sat when commencing the deed.

He used an old .32 calibre revolver, which was found in his lap, and entered at the right temple, pierced the head and struck the wall of the room. The bedroom is on the second floor and Mr. and Mrs. McCoy, who sleep downstairs, were not aroused.

Although Sanborn left no note, friends and relatives believed he had planned the deed for some time, and say that he had hinted at such an act. Both his wife and an only son preceded him in death, and loneliness is believed to have caused despondency. Although apparently in his usual spirits Saturday, he held a cow, the last he owned, and completed the transfer of certain papers to his sister-in-law, Mrs. Maude Stark, who for five years until two months ago was his housekeeper, living there with her sister, Mrs. L. O. Ott. A strong box, containing valuable papers was found in the room in which the suicide took place, but the suicide was the first in the experience of Coroner Chambliss in which no note of explanation was left. Mr. Sanborn was born in New Haven, Conn., June 15, 1846, and came to Ohio when a young man.

For a number of years before and after his marriage to Miss Julia Stark, member of a well-known Greene County family, he operated a railroad restaurant at the Pennsylvania station. Thirty-five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn moved to the property on Rogers St., where for a number of years they conducted a home dairy.

Their only son, Louis Sanborn, who was connected with the Burroughs and Gage Machine Co., drowned at Detroit, Mich., thirteen years ago and Mrs. Sanborn died eight years ago. A sister, Mrs. Sarah Balch, Andover, Mass., survives, with ten nieces and nephews located in New England and California. A nephew, George McNeef, Xenia, and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Stark, are the nearest surviving relatives here. Funeral services will be held at the Woodland Cemetery Chapel at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday and burial will be made there beside the bodies of his wife and son.

GRANGE IN HOSPITAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Red Grange, New York Yankee professional football star, today definitely retired to a hospital for a lengthy rest as his right leg was placed in a plaster cast. Water on the knee has developed, physicians said. C. C. Pyle, owner of the Yankees, announced that Grange would be in action again in time for the Thanksgiving game with Benny Friedman's Bulldogs.

GEORGE REMUS WILL PLEAD "TEMPORARY INSANITY" HE SAYS

Former Bootlegging King
To Conduct His Own
Defense

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 14.—George Remus, one-time millionaire "King of the Bootleggers," who goes on trial today for the murder of his wife, Imogene, whom he shot and killed in Eden Park, Cincinnati, on Oct. 3, will plead "temporary marauding insanity," he told the writer in his cell on the sixth floor of the county building this morning, as he prepared to go to court.

"Remus brain exploded when he shot her," said Remus. "He was momentarily out of his mind." Remus always refers to himself as "Remus," seldom using the first person pronoun. It is not "my trial," it is "Remus' trial." A former Chicago criminal lawyer, Remus will act as his own attorney, being assisted by his co-counsel, Charles H. Elston. Remus said he would make the opening defense plea to the jury himself and that he planned to take part in the cross examination of witnesses.

Seventy-five veniremen, from whom the jury will be selected, have been summoned to appear this morning in Judge Chester R. Shook's criminal court where the trial will be held.

Arrayed against the defense will be three attorneys for the state led by Charles P. Taft, son of William Howard Taft, former president of the United States. Attorney Taft said he would demand the death penalty and the electric chair for Remus.

In his cell in the sixth floor of the county building Remus graciously received the International News Service correspondent. He is excessively polite and his speech is sprinkled with legal phraseology, such remarks as "the said witness," or "the defendant Remus," giving his conversation a fantastic twist.

He ushered the reporter into his "office," a room assigned to him close to his cell. He used this office in preparing his case. The room in the room is attacked with law books. A prisoner "doing time" for impersonating a federal officer sat at a typewriter. He is Remus' stenographer. Holly wreaths, sent to him by friends, adorned the walls.

"I feel fine physically and as well mentally as is possible under the circumstances," said Remus in response to a question. Remus paused thoughtfully, a frown wrinkling his massive forehead.

"I am making the best of a damnable situation," he declared. "I am of course mentally depressed at times. What can one expect when confined in prison and in the predicament Remus finds himself?"

Remus, during a conversation, lasting more than an hour, repeatedly referred to "him" and "her," meaning Franklin L. Dodge, Jr., a former dry agent, and Mary Remus, a bootleg king declared "because she double-crossed me for him. It was too much. It weighed upon my mind, and on that fatal morning, early in October, my brain exploded and I shot her dead."

"She and that man had done all in their power to ruin me. She had deserted me for him, my bitterest enemy she robbed me of my fortune, had me kept in jail. Had plotted to have me killed and even tried to have me deported to a country I had not been in for forty-six years—since I was three years old."

"So when I followed her taxi in my car in Eden Park on the morning of October 6, I thought of all these things. I knew she was then on her way to court to divorce me. When I caught up to her and seized her by the hand, intending to take her to give up the life she was leading. And she said, 'Daddy, don't hurt me, you know I love you, why my mind just blew up and I shot her.' I knew she was not sincere. She got her just deserts."

Asked if he still loved her, despite what she charged, he did it him. Remus laughed shrilly, almost sarcastically.

"Love—love," he repeated, "Love isn't the word." He looked at the floor for several minutes without uttering a word. Then said softly: "The woman she was when I married her I loved—yes, indeed. But how she changed when that man wormed his way into her good graces."

Remus said he had received countless offers of financial assistance, but had turned them all down.

WASHINGTON ENTERTAINS AERIAL ARISTOCRACY TO HONOR LINDBERGH

TWO BELIEVED FATALLY HURT WHEN BUS AND TWO AUTOS CRASH

NELSONVILLE, O., Nov. 14.—Two persons were in a hospital at Logan today with injuries which may prove fatal, and twelve others were recovering from minor injuries as the result of a crash between a motor bus and two automobiles near here Sunday.

The bus, traveling north, was spun half way around when one of its wheels was knocked off by an automobile. Immediately afterwards, an automobile driven by Harvey Ruble, of Haydensville, crashed into the bus, turning it over.

Ruble and his wife were slightly hurt and Miss Zoe Pollock, 18, of Haydensville, Mrs. Ruble's sister, suffered concussion of the brain. Wilford Pickett, 45, of Haydensville, a passenger on the bus, attempted to jump and was crushed beneath the overturning vehicle. Ten other passengers on the bus were slightly hurt.

Both Miss Pollock and Pickett were taken to a hospital at Logan, where they were reported in critical condition today.

RADIO COMMISSION TO CLEAR CHANNELS FOR BIG STATIONS

National Stations To Be Favored By Clarifying
Wave

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Another major surgical operation on radio frequency allocations will be announced soon by the Federal Radio Commission.

Admiral W. H. G. Bullard, chairman of the commission, said today that plans are being made to clear of interference the channels between 229.7 and 499.5 meters, giving virtually unimpeded broadcasting lanes for thirty-five national stations.

This section of the radio setup—600 to 1000 kilocycles—is most important from the listeners standpoint, for within these limits are found practically all of the high power and so-called national broadcasting stations.

If a successful method of eliminating interference is found by the commission one of the greatest contributions to long distance reception of the broadcasting channel of 550 to 1,500 kilocycles, power cutting in some cases, with arrangement of greater frequency separation between high power stations.

For some time the commission has had the wide length allocations under the X-ray. Thousands of letters from radio fans all over the country disclosing both public opinion as to popularity of stations and interference conditions have been considered, as well as reports from the district supervisors. The bureau of standards and commerce department radio sections have cooperated in a scientific study of the latest allocations.

There are thirty-five wave channels available for distribution in the 600-1000 kilocycle band, six of them being shared with Canadian stations. Mexico and Cuba are demanding broadcasting rights.

It is not anticipated by the commission that much improvement may be hoped for in the band over 1000 kilocycles with the present number of stations on the air. This view of the set-up, suggested as a "radio graveyard" at the first public hearing of the commission, is and probably will remain just that for some time to come.

Between 600 and 1000 kilocycles are found thirty-one stations with power of 1,500 watts or greater. KDKA, Pittsburgh, WEA, New York and WGY, of Schenectady, topping the list with 50,000 watts. Other important stations in this band which probably will be benefited by the new plan include WBAP and WFAA, of Dallas, WSAI and WLW of Cincinnati, WJZ of New York, WQFL, WHT, WBBM, WLS, WCOB, and WBBH of Chicago, WSB, of Atlanta, KFI of Los Angeles, WJZ, of Pontiac, WOR of Newark, WCCO of Minneapolis, WTAM of Cleveland, KGO, Oakland, KOA of Denver, WSM of Nashville and others.

You may not know them under that name but if you will turn to this entertaining new comic on the Gazette's full page of comics, you will recognize the characters immediately.

Barry Payne has drawn from real life to build up the Gabb family—Gertie Gabb, Dame Rumor's first assistant, J. Elmer Gabb, Gertie's growling husband and Sophie Snop, a professional gossip.

The Gabb comic less than a month old, is being added to the list of comics carried by this paper because the comic is believed to be unique in the field of newspaper art. Get acquainted with the Gabb family today.

LABOR CONFERENCE CALLED TO DISCUSS COAL MINE STRIKE

Union Leaders Plan
Answer To Attack
Of Mine Owners

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 14.—A conference of labor leaders from all parts of the country and representing all crafts regarded as the most important event in the bituminous coal strike situation since the impasse began on April 1, opened here today.

Answering the call of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, the union leaders came here for the express purpose of "devising methods to meet the attack against the United Mine Workers by anti-union coal owners and their industrial, financial and political allies."

These matters especially will occupy the attention of the conference. The federal injunction restricting strike activities against the Pittsburgh terminal coal corporation under the X-ray.

The union heads are here for the announced purpose of bringing political influence of labor leaders to bear in behalf of the western Pennsylvania miners, whose status has not improved while new wage agreements were being negotiated in Illinois and other soft coal regions.

While refusing officially to take cognizance of the meeting, the managements of the Pittsburgh Coal company, largest bituminous coal company in the world, and the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, an other dominant firm, do not attempt to conceal their intense interest in this latest development.

Both of these companies which for years operated their scores of western Pennsylvania mines with union labor have renounced the United Mine workers and are operating non-union, claiming they cannot continue to pay the wages demanded by the union and compete with non-union mined coal of West Virginia and Kentucky.

Gov. Fisher of Pennsylvania, has been invited to address the conference, as has former Gov. Pinchot, President Green and John L. Lewis, head of the miners union, are here. The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor sent its executive council.

Other nationally known men whose presence is counted on by sponsors of the conference include: Frank Morrison, of the Typographical Union and secretary of the A. F. of L.; Matthew Ryan, president of the railway carmen; James Noonan, of the electrical workers; Matthew Wolf, of the photo engravers; Daniel Tobin, head of the teamsters union; Frank Duffy, representing the carpenters, and Jacob Fisher, of the barbers' union, in addition to Philip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers, and P. T. Fagan, head of the district miners union.

DARING PILOTS ARE VISITORS AT WHITE HOUSE LUNCHEON

Aviation Future To Be Discussed By Flying
Aces

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The capital played host today to the aerial aristocracy of the world.

Eighteen men and a lone slip of a girl, all of whom have gained world wide fame this summer for daring trans-oceanic flights, gathered in Washington today for the dual purpose of having lunch at the White House and seeing one of their number, Col. Charles Lindbergh, receive the coveted Hubbard medal tonight.

Talk of future ocean-spanning flights filled the air as the flyers congregated.

Edward P. Schlee, who, with Wm. S. Brock, flew half-way across the world, announced that a flight from Detroit to Rio de Janeiro will be attempted as soon as weather conditions are right next spring. The route to be followed, he said, would be approximately the same as that essayed by Paul Reffern, the Georgian, who lost his life while trying a Brunswick-to-Rio flight.

The trans-oceanic flyers listed as luncheon guests of President Coolidge today are: Col. Charles Lindbergh, Commander Richard E. Byrd, with his "crew" consisting of George O. Noville, Bert Acosta and Bert Balchen; Clarence L. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, the New York-to-Germany flyers; Lieut. Lester J. Maitland and Albert Hagenberger, first to negotiate the California-to-Hawaii flight; Arthur C. Goebel and Capt. Wm. V. Davis, winners of the Dole race; Paul Schuller and Martin Jensen, second in the Dole flight; Ernest L. Smith, another Dole flyer, Edward P. Schlee and William S. Brock, the round-the-world flyers; and lastly, Capt. George Haldeman and Ruth Elder, the latest toast in trans-oceanic flying circles.

Before one of the most distinguished audiences that ever attended a public function in the capital, President Coolidge tonight will pin the Hubbard medal on the breast of Col. Lindbergh. All of the cabinet officers who are in the city, justices of the Supreme Court, senators and congressmen, members of the diplomatic corps, the ranking heads of the army and navy, and the social elite of the capital generally will comprise the audience.

The Hubbard medal is conferred by the National Geographic Society. But seven other men in history have secured it, Commander Robert E. Peary, Capt. Roald Amundsen, Grove Carl Gilbert, Sir Ernest Shackleton, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, and Commander Richard E. Byrd.

There will be brief speeches tonight by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, head of the Geographic Society; Wm. P. McCracken, air secretary of the department of commerce, and Col. Lindbergh. These will be followed by the exhibition of historic flying pictures.

On each of the sick, tubercular or crippled patients who went before him Sunday, Dr. Stratton laid his oil-anointed hands, amid shouting of "hallelujah" and weeping. Several paralytics announced they were cured.

STATE MAY OFFER LENDEL CASE ENTRY

CANTON, O., Nov. 14.—Unless F. R. Hahn, attorney for S. A. Lengel, files a journal entry in the Lengel case within the next few days, the state will take steps to have it filed by the court here. Prosecuting Attorney Henry Harter has announced.

Until an entry is filed, no action can be taken and Harter wants to perfect an appeal to the Ohio Supreme Court to have the case reversed. Lengel, former Canton police chief, awaits a new trial on charges of complicity in the Dan Mellett murder here over a year ago.

LINDBERGH WILL BE GUEST OF COOLIDGE

CURTIS FIELD, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh left here for Bolling Field, Washington, at 9:45 a. m. today at the controls of a Fairchild cabin monoplane, to be a luncheon guest of President Coolidge at the White House. He was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, of Detroit, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Guggenheim, of Port Washington.

Blast Occurs In Gas Company Tank—Death And Destruction Spread For Miles In City's Worst Disaster—Relief Rushed

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 14.—Twenty persons are known to have been killed, eleven of whom are in the county morgue, in the explosion at the Equitable Gas Company's Reedsdale St. plant here today, police announced at 11 o'clock.

They said the list of injured is expected to exceed 500. A check of the main hospitals at this hour showed that 111 victims had been received there for treatment.

The city's asphalt plant across the street from the gas tank was demolished and ten of the fifteen men at work there were reported killed.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 14.—Hundreds of persons injured and many probably were killed when a huge gas tank exploded in the plant of The Equitable Gas Company on the northside here at 8:43 a. m. today.

There was a deafening roar, a burst of flames and a cloud of smoke rising from the scene of the explosion as the tank let go.

Wild reports were circulated at first that hundreds were reported dead or dying as the entire lower northside was wrecked by the blast which spread death and destruction for miles.

Ambulances and fire apparatus fought their way through the crowds with great difficulty. A general call was sent out to every hospital in the city to rush all available physicians and ambulances.

It will be hours before anything like a reliable casualty list can be compiled, police said, because of the great extent of the explosion and resultant turmoil throughout the entire downtown district.

Buildings were leveled for two blocks. There was a mass of broken glass from the windows of office buildings in all downtown streets within miles of the gas company plant.

Two street cars were lifted from the rails and turned completely around. The cars were loaded with passengers on their way to work.

Northside residents were panic-stricken by what police described as probably the worst disaster in the city's history. Terrified men, women and children deserted their homes in fear, running through the streets as though mad.

Hospitals on the northside were soon filled with victims and it was necessary to commandeer all sorts of automobiles to rush the injured to hospitals in outlying districts.

A man on the second story of a lively stable two blocks from where the tank let go was catapulted through a window to the street. His scalp was cut and hands bruised.

Telephone and electric light and power service on the northside went out simultaneously, as the main wires, running near the plant, were blown to bits.

Coroner William J. McGregor who rushed to the scene said half an hour after the blast that he was unable to even estimate the number of dead.

Nothing but a gaping hole was left on the site of the tank that exploded. Small buildings in the immediate vicinity were crushed like egg shells.

Windows in the Pennsylvania Railroad station more than two miles from the blast were blown out. The telephone company Cedar exchange near the explosion was put out of commission as every window in the building blew out.

David Kerr, employed in a live stable four blocks from the plant, was lifted off the sidewalk by the concussion. He describes the explosion as follows:

"I saw a sheet of flame a half mile high at the same time I saw a cloud of black smoke rise into the air. One man standing in front of a gas tank was lifted at least 100 feet in the air, as if he was a scrap of paper."

"Glass was flying all around him. Several pieces hit him. When I was picked up the man had cash across his neck, several wounds and apparently his legs were broken. He was taken to hospital."

At 10:30 a. m., police said they feared the loss of life would be appalling, though confusion was great at the scene of the disaster. They could not even approximate the death toll or number injured at this hour.

Likewise, the property loss remained undetermined, but police claimed it would exceed a million dollars.

W. S. Brotzman, U. S. weather observer, said the blast shook the Cleveland Livestock and a cash across his neck, several wounds and apparently his legs were broken. He was taken to hospital.

The blast occurred on the north side of the Allegheny River, near the point where it meets the Monongahela River to form the Ohio.

NATIONAL GRANGE DELEGATES GATHER

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 14.—7 vanguard of 32,000 delegates to visitors from all parts of the country, to the National Grange Convention, which opens here tomorrow and continues through November 24, were arriving in the city today. The Ohio Grange Convention is the Cleveland Livestock and a cash across his neck, several wounds and apparently his legs were broken. He was taken to hospital.

The Ohio Grange, which has been in existence for more than a century, plans to enter immediately into business sessions Tuesday, according to recent announcement the Buckeye aggregation holds 1927 record for growth in the national grange. It has organized forty of 137 new lodges throughout the country, the announcement said.

JURY SELECTION IN WASHINGTON BOUND IN TECHNICALITIES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14—The honorable jury commission of the District of Columbia is in a quandary. Briefly, it wants to know how to go about getting a group of tallmen from which to draw the jury that is to sit in the retrial of the Teapot Dome conspiracy case. Although ex-Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, the millionaire oil magnate, do not come up for retrial until January 16, the jury question already is worrying district authorities.

Aside from the usual difficulties which arise in picking a panel to try an important criminal case which has received wide publicity in any community, the district jury commissioners find their task complicated by innumerable special restrictions which are imposed upon them, by reason of extraordinary disqualifications attaching to jury service in the case.

Prospective jurors must first off meet the usual requirements of legal age, American citizenship, and residence within the district. They must be able to read and write, understand English, and they must not have a record of conviction of a crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, nor follow occupations which are exempted from jury service, including the legal and medical professions, the clergy, or be law enforcement officers or special officers.

But, because the United States government is a vitally interested party to the case, they must not be connected in any way with the government—and that automatically excludes possibly a third of the district's 480,000 population.

Then follows a long list of additional disqualifications which must be hurdled before the venturers even get a chance to answer their names in court, and be examined by the opposing attorneys.

They must not have any pending contract with the United States government, nor the district; must not be holders of war risk insurance—which excludes practically every man who saw any kind of war service; nor have received any war bonus or be eligible for any pension; must be neither tenant or landlord of any government bureau or department; must not even own a store in which is located a branch postoffice or stamp agency; and must not receive pay or bonus from the government or the District of Columbia. The venemore may not be members of the reserve army or naval forces, or notaries public.

Having passed all these barriers, the twelve men who take their places eventually in the jury box must not have formed any opinions from reading or hearing about the most widely discussed and published litigation in a decade, which has been before the Federal District, appellate and Supreme Courts almost constantly for four years.

Farm Notes

HONOR WHEAT CLUB
Eight new members will be added this year to the honor club of Ohio farmers who have produced more than forty bushels of wheat on each of at least ten acres. In addition to the eight new members, H. L. Longnecker, Whitehouse, Lucas County, has fulfilled the requirements for admission a second year. He became a member in 1926 when he produced 57.11 bushels an acre. This year he produced 55.29 bushels, the highest yield reported. The club now has twenty-six members.

The men whose names will be added to the roll this year are: Glenn Marshall, Dola, Hardin County, 47.54 bushels; Ira Marshall, Dola, Hardin County, 47.54 bushels; Wendell Baker, Urbana, Champaign County, 47.26 bushels; Clarence Slack, Trinway, Muskingum County, 46.7 bushels; Otto Miller, McClure, Henry County, 45.4 bushels.

MODERN YOUTHS ARE GIVEN CLEAN BILL

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14—“Young people have just as much moral stamina and sense of what is right these days, as they ever had,” according to Colonel George L. Converse, of Columbus, a former commandant of the Reserve Officers Training Corps at Ohio State University.

“There is nothing wrong with the modern youth,” Colonel Converse maintained. “It is the great wealth and modern luxuries that cause people to decay the youth of today.”

Colonel Converse who is a graduate of West Point and a famed military leader, was head of the military department at Ohio State for nineteen years, starting in 1909. When the colonel took command here there were 425 cadets enrolled in the R. O. T. C. At the present time more than 3700 are taking the course.

Twenty Years '07 - Ago - '27

A fine program has been arranged for the second annual reunion of the Knights of Pythias of Greene County at the Opera House, November 23. Mr. H. Wolfson, proprietor of the Xenia Dry Cleaning Co. has purchased the Neeld property on S. Detroit St.

Dr. Whinnery, of Yellow Springs, left for New York.

The Zion Reformed Church is about to begin a lecture course of five numbers.

East High School, Xenia, was awarded a silver medal by the Jamestown Exposition on its exhibit of class room and industrial work.

STATE OFFICIALS DEFINE RABBIT LAW

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14—In response to inquiries received by state officials here concerning the number of rabbits that may be possessed under Amended Section 1396 (B) of the General Code, hunters are advised that enforcement will be strictly in accordance with the language of the statute. “A person may take in one day and have in his possession at one time, not more than five hares or rabbits except as provided in the section, but no person shall catch, kill, injure or pursue with such intent a hare or rabbit, except from one hour before sunrise to one hour after sunset.”

Attention is also directed to Section 1396 (A) “Hares and rabbits may be taken and possessed only from the fifteenth day of November to the first day of January, both inclusive, and such taking shall be done only with gun and dog, or with gun. The owner of lands or his tenants or bona fide employees, may take, except Sunday, and, in any number, hares, or rabbits which are found doing actual damage to grain, berries, fruit, vegetables, trees and shrubbery, the property of such owner.”

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creosolium, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creosolium is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creosolium contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

GOES SCHOOL WILL DEDICATE NEW LIGHTS, GIFT OF EX-PUPIL

Former pupils and former teachers of District No. 4 school at Goes Station, will attend a homecoming at the school November 18 when the new electric wiring and light installations donated by R. Hayes Hamilton, Xenia, former pupil, will be formally presented.

The Goes Community Club and county school officials are co-operating in the program and every one who has ever lived at Goes or attended school there, is invited to attend the affair. H. C. Aultman, county school superintendent, is sending formal invitations to all former teachers whose names are available and those not formally invited are requested to attend without formality.

J. F. Shoemaker, Goes store keeper, is assisting in arrangements for the program. Mr. Hamilton attended the school at Goes eight years during his grade school years. After he created the Hamilton Travelogue lectures, which he delivered from coast to coast he found that attempts to give his illustrated lectures in the Goes school were handicapped because the school was not connected with electricity.

Mr. Hamilton then told board members that he would pay for the installation of lights and fixtures at the Dayton Power and Light Co., arranged to provide current to that community. The company installed a transformer in order to service residents last spring, and during the summer the building was wired and light fixtures installed at Mr. Hamilton's direction.

The tentative program arranged for the formal presentation program includes a reunion of former pupils and teachers at 7:30 p. m., November 18, and one minute speeches by former pupils and teachers. County Superintendent Aultman will introduce Mr. Hamilton who will make formal presentation of the new lights and the gift will be accepted by J. F. Shoemaker, on behalf of the board and patrons.

Under the new electric power, Mr. Hamilton will present one of his latest lectures, together with motion pictures taken in Bermuda, and a movie lecture of Henry Ford's model "little school" at Dearborn, Mich., and other appropriate pictures.

THE Y. M. C. A. AGAIN

Nov. 14, 1927.

Dear Editor:

Having read a letter in your paper, written by the sixth grade pupils of Spring Hill School, pleading to the different organizations and the business men of the city to help them to get the people of Xenia interested in getting a Y. M. C. A. and a Y. W. C. A. organized in our city, and as I am very much interested in the welfare of the children of Xenia, I hope and pray that the people of Xenia will not turn a deaf ear to the plea of these children.

Let us back them up, and give them a place where they can get clean constructive instructions that will make them women and men. Xenia will be proud of.

FLYING STRAIGHT UP

From time to time we hear of various projects connected with the building of an airplane that will rise vertically from the ground and will descend vertically and at controlled speed from the air.

Few have any doubt whatever that such a plane will be built. The only question involved concerns when it will be built.

Hundreds of inventors and engineers, the world around, are at work on this problem of the helicopter of hovering device. Several fairly successful machines have been launched, with great secrecy, and there is a widespread belief that the British army may even now have a helicopter that is almost at the practical stage.

The Curtiss company is now engaged in preliminary work on an airplane that is designed to rise vertically. This plane will have no motors for forward propulsion, but will merely climb and glide and climb and glide again. It will not make the distance across the continent so rapidly as the present type of plane but maybe it will be so much less liable to accident that there will be a demand for it, even though it takes along at sixty to seventy miles an hour.

Of course somebody will have a plane soon that will rise and alight vertically, and also will go forward at high speed. While we await the appearance of this phenomenon, aviation is growing as no other transportation industry in the history of the world ever grew.

And here is a lesson for cities. The towns that get themselves adjusted to the new transportation first will have a tremendous advantage. In naming the features of a city containing the greatest promise for future commercial greatness, a perfect airport should be among the first.

A perfect airport, of course, should be close to the heart of the city. It should be large, and it can't be too large. It should offer every facility for airplane servicing, and it should be perfectly lighted.

The perfect airport should have a mooring mast for airships. There are very few of these mooring masts in North America now, and the inland city that puts one on its airport before its neighbors get around to the consideration of such a project will have a publicity asset that will be worth more than five hundred parades and four hundred booklets.

We're going to be flying straight up soon. Meantime, aviation will go ahead, and the wise city will adjust itself to flight. There are some excellent airports in this country now, but many more are needed. What American city, for instance, will be to the airplane industry what Detroit is to the automobile business? The lists are still open.

URGES GOODWILL

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, a few years ago looked upon as the captain of the Modernist host which was carrying on an attack against Fundamentalism, now declares that the whole controversy was a waste of time and that henceforth the two camps will view each other with the greatest goodwill.

Writing in "The New Age" under the title of "What Future Religion?" the man who on Sunday, May 21, 1922, preached his famous sermon, "Shall the Fundamentalists Win?" today says of the next few years, "There will almost surely be an era of good feeling so far as theological differences are concerned. The modernist-fundamentalist controversy has petered out. No problems have been solved by it, as is generally the case in such controversies. They are uniformly a lamentable waste of time and energy for all people concerned. After this recent outburst will come as usual an epoch during which both conservatives and liberals will recognize that whatever may be the truth about theology, good will is religion. There will, of course, be die-hards in both parties who will wish to keep up their vehemence. In general, however, alike the militant fundamentalist and the supercilious liberal will meet with scant sympathy from the Christian public."

Among other movements which the pastor of one of New York's richest churches believes the next few years will see most pronounced in our religious life are chiefly an increasing demand for unity among the disaffected branches of the church, an increasing disturbance of the Christian conscience as to our economic and international paganism and a renaissance of dignity and beauty in worship.

The Way of the World

BUNK OF BUSINESS

There is a great deal of bunk talked about business. We pretend business is good when it isn't. We fool nobody. We pretend business is bad when it is not bad. And we fool nobody. Of course business must be bad sometimes. It always has had periods of being bad and always will have. Those things come and go. For business to fluctuate is normal. We live in a normal country. Be thankful of that. And thank God we are strong enough in this country to stand the ebb and flow of the tide. Perhaps the business world needs more sense and less lung-made psychology.

THINK FOR YOURSELF

Don't be too much impressed by what your neighbor is thinking and doing. Democracy doesn't mean that men shall be like bricks in a wall, all the same size, shape and color. Don't let anybody else make your opinions for you. Don't be standardized. The world is full of all kinds of standardization now. Be as near right about your opinions and your acts as you know how. Don't waste your time by looking over the wall into your neighbor's dooryard.

SATURATION

One of the ablest manufacturers in this country gives a sensible definition of the "saturation point." We are always hearing about the saturation point for motor cars and for other products. In reality there are such things? Of course there are, theoretically, but not practically. The saturation point for any given article will be reached when "everybody has one and none ever wears out."

The Daybook
OF A
New YorkerBy
Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Nov. 14. — On East Fourteenth street, sandwiched between burlesque show, movie palaces and automat restaurants is Luchow's, a relic of pre-war New York. This was one of the most famous restaurants of its day, but its day was darkened by the heavy cloud of prohibition. Luchow's re-established the atmosphere of a European beer garden. Here came all the famous, to drink their foam-capped inimitable draught, over their weighty exchange of thought. Here was the meeting place of renowned societies. Here was the spot in which beer was supreme and in which stronger liquors were abhorred. Here was the popular rendezvous of O. Henry, of De Pachtman, of Paderewski, of Anton Dvorak, and a multitude of other equally brilliant artistic lights.

But this Luchow's is no more. True, there is still a place by that name at the same place. But inside, there are only relics of the glorious past. Instead of quaffing the foaming brew, there are only mournful waiters bearing dietetically correct food in place of the frothy flagons of old. There are only wistful ghosts to haunt the once brilliant meeting place of pre-Volstead New York.

Things cost more in New York and environs than in any place else in the country. I believe, my neighbor paid $2.50 for a birthday cake of simple design. In Chicago you can get a well trimmed one for sixty cents. We may thirty-five cents for a small bottle of cream, which all through the middle west sells at just half the price. The best eggs now cost almost a dollar a dozen. That price, too, is double what they pay out in Illinois. I do not believe that New York salaries are proportionately higher, but the necessities of life certainly cost a lot in this part of the world.

There is a chauffeur for one of the Shuberts who always guesses almost the exact time at which his master will tire of an opening performance at a theatre and drives up to the entrance in the Rolls-Royce. That is the apotheosis of dramatic criticism.

There is a newsdealer in a suburb in Westchester who is an Englishman who has not been over here long enough to think in dollars, quids, pence, nickels and coins. He quotes the prices of wares at his stand—which includes chewing-gum, candy, cigars, magazines and stationery—in shillings and pence. I understand his plight. When I am abroad and the price of something is quoted to me, I can make nothing of it until I have gone through the mental arithmetic of reducing the price to terms in American money at the prevailing rate of exchange.

KELLYGRAMS

by Fred C. Kelly

Talkers and Listeners

My old friend, Julian K. Viles, for nearly 40 years conducted a fishing camp in the wilds of Maine—the only one I ever heard of where they guarantee the fishing. If you didn't catch all the speckled trout you wanted, and on the fly, there was no charge for your board. Naturally, Viles attracted guests from remote parts of the country.

"You must have picked up a lot of information from talking to all these smart business men who have come here during 40 years," I suggested to this old man of past three-score and ten, as we sat before some blazing logs.

"The trouble is," he replied, "that the one who knows most has the least to say. They're busy just asking questions and trying to see what they can find out. The folks who don't know much—they do all the talking."

If anybody wants proof of that remark, let him look up almost any copy of the Congressional Record!

What a lot of things in everyday affairs we must take on faith! Yesterday I ate mushrooms in a strange hotel. The only assurance I had that there were no poisonous toadstools in them was the fact that the hotel appeared to be a well-conducted place, whose managers, doubtless, would take precautions against poisoning guests.

The milk and cream seemed good, and yet I know that many dairy barns are none too clean. I could only accept on faith that milk in the hotel was from a place where cows are treated as prima donnas.

When a man tells me that he takes nothing on faith but always has to be shown, I know that he is either a liar or a fool.

Last year the head of a big shoe factory tried to make various savings and reduce the total time required to manufacture each pair of shoes. Most of the foremen said this couldn't be done. They were working at high speed already.

"Well," suggested the big boss, "do you suppose we could clip off a second from the time a shoe is on each different machine?"

They made that one second saving their goal, and of course succeeded. Almost anybody can save a second, can't he?

The total number of seconds thus saved had a value, so I am assured, of nearly $100,000 a year!

ONE HUNTING SEASON THAT NEVER CLOSSES

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Your Mirrors Mean Much to Your Beauty

Psychologists have found that attention is the first law of life and that every living organism grows like that to which it gives attention. This is of great importance to beauty. The flower that was "born to blush unseen and waste its fragrance on the desert air" comparatively rare in human species. Beautiful surroundings, pleasant circumstances and an impersonal, unobtrusive knowledge of her own beauty attributes, add tenfold to a woman's charm.

You all know of cases in which a homely, sullen little girl was taken out of a drab orphanage into a lovely home, given pretty clothes and mirrors. She blossomed out into such beauty as no one believed she had. That is because her attention has been taken away from sordid, unattractive surroundings into a place where everything that strikes her consciousness is beauty.

But most of us live in a complex world where our attention is demanded by a multitude of things, some unlovely. The choice of what we allow to come into our consciousness, to influence our thought and looks, lies entirely with us. We are potentially anything, and the will is the burning glass that focuses our attention.

The more concentrated that is, the swifter and more intensive the results. For instance, you can cook half-heartedly all your life, but if you wish to be a really good cook, you must give your undivided attention on books and you will become literary. And by the same token, direct it always toward beauty and you will be beautiful.

I am not telling you to do anything difficult when I advise you to give attention to your reflection in the mirror. Your own reflection naturally interests you more than anything else. Just try passing all the mirrors that cross your vision without looking into them. It is a definite effort to keep your eyes away.

Yet most women have a sort of repression that keeps them from giving their undivided attention to a mirror. They are self-conscious about seeing themselves, and they either consciously avoid seeing their reflections except in the privacy of their own boudoirs or else take a stiff, formal pose before a mirror just as if they were greeting a stranger.

Your reflection should not be a stranger. It should be your warmest and most natural friend, as well as your severest critic. Frankly set out to study yourself in the mirror from every angle. Get a close-up of your skin to determine your complexion needs. Examine the very grain of your skin. See your whole figure at a distance to get an idea of line—your silhouette, your carriage, the "toute ensemble" of your appearance. That is the surest way to perfect poise for the woman who knows she looks right is untroubled when she greets strangers by the petty worries about whether her skirt hangs well or whether she has put on the right shade of stockings.

Be sure of your profile view from every angle. It is every bit as important to your beauty as the front view. Move around in front of the mirror, sit down, stand up, walk; see yourself move as others see you. That is the way to get grace and co-ordination of movement, for what is practiced sufficiently becomes habit.

In my talks this week I am going to take up the various kinds of mirrors and what they can contribute to your beauty.

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent.

Straight Into the Gap

At last Peter's curiosity got the better of him. What in the world was Mrs. Flittermouse making all that rumpus about? He leaned forward as far as he dared and tapped the Bat on the tip of her pink ear.

"Is anything wrong?" asked the boy. "Tell me if you have sighted danger ahead. I had much rather know the worst that go on imagining all sorts of things as I have been doing ever since you started to give those cries. Why are you squealing so, anyhow?"

Mrs. Flittermouse impatiently twitched one wing, but she did stop chewing long enough to answer.

"Such a foolish question to ask at a time like this! Why do I squeal? I don't know, but I'll tell you one thing! No Bat ever went on a hunt who didn't! Why, you can't guess how exciting the sport is. This very minute my heart is flopping about like a Tumble-Bug, and all because I don't know what instant a foolish insect will fly straight into my trap."

"Your trap," echoed Peter.

of success, always told everybody that his business was booming, whether it was or not. He was a real optimist. The result was that another man took him at his word, and started a grocery next door, feeling sure that there must be plenty of business there for both.

But with the trade thus divided, both went bankrupt.

Today's Recipes

Black Bean Soup—One pint beans, one small onion, one celery root, one tablespoon flour, two tablespoons butter, two hard-boiled eggs, one teaspoon salt, one saltspoon pepper, one-fourth saltspoon paprika, one lemon. Soak beans overnight, boil them with two quarts of water. Slice onion and fry it in the butter with the root. When beans are soft rub through a strainer, add seasonings, flour and one tablespoon butter cooked together. If too thick, add more water. Serve with a slice of lemon and hard-boiled egg in each plate.

Salmon Salad—One can salmon, one bunch celery, six cold boiled potatoes, juice of one lemon, ten chopped English walnuts, salad dressing. Free the almost of skin and bones, flake lightly. Chop the boiled potatoes, also celery. Mix all and add lemon juice. Mix with salad dressing, garnish top with chopped nuts and serve on lettuce.

Suggestions

Creaming Butter and Sugar
In cold weather it is often difficult to cream the butter and sugar for cake. Add one or two tablespoons of boiling water to the butter to soften it. If the butter remains separated from the water pour it off, or it will have to be deducted from the liquid allowance as given in the recipe.

Little Items of Importance

Clean clouded plate glass with alcohol.
Dampened ashes will clean steel knives.
Salt and vinegar will remove stains from tea cups.
Wax paper wrappings are nice for the hot iron instead of beeswax. Save them.

Cocoa Sponge Cake

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)

Three eggs, one cup sugar, four tablespoons cold water, one cup pastry flour, three tablespoons dry cocoa, one teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Beat eggs until light and foamy, beat sugar in gradually, add the water, then the flour. Add cold water, then flour mixed with cocoa, baking powder and salt sifted twice. Beat mixture hard two or three minutes, add vanilla. Pour into very small greased muffin pans, filling two-thirds full. Bake in a moderate oven fifteen minutes.

Instead, having by this time quite finished her meal of moth, she again began to utter those shrill cries, darting now this way, now that, dipping, soaring, to the right, to the left, until Peter's eyes began to feel as though sand was being thrown into them, and if he hadn't known better he would have thought sharp needles were pricking his toes.

Behind The Scenes
In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Secretary William M. Jardine again denies that he's going to resign—right away.

He says he intends to stay on the job through the next session of congress anyway, and it sounds probable. Putative father, as he is, of the compromise farm relief plan with which the administration hopes to satisfy the corn belt this coming winter, it would be a mean trick in him to quit now, virtually repudiating the poor thing just at a time when it most needs the countenance of his recognition and his name.

What with the attempt to replace so vital an organ as its equalization fee by the doubtful substitution of a revolving fund, it's a sickly infant at best. Darn few vicissitudes would settle its hash for good.

However, if Secretary Jardine had known, two and a half years ago, some of the things he must know today, we're at liberty to wonder if ever he'd have been minister of agriculture at all.

Only a few days after he was sworn in, I had a talk with him. For Jardine, heretofore a vein of poetry running through him. He said he was aware the farmers were up against it. Yet, he pointed out, they have their compensations. They live close to nature. The greenery all around 'em is their greenery. The new-mown smells are their smells. The meadowland overhead is their lark. When it snows, in winter, it's their snow.

This kind of stuff, the newly-appointed secretary remarked, has a value that can't be reckoned in cash, and he intimated that he had an idea it might be possible to make the farmers see it, and include it in their inventories.

I distinctly recall that I questioned this in my own mind.

Even if the farmers did as the secretary recommended, I couldn't see how they were going to apply it on their mortgages. Senators from some of the western states, like Nye and Frazier, Norris, Brookhart and Shipstead, have since told me that they couldn't solve this problem either, and now they say they're convinced the reason was that nobody could solve it—it was a puzzle with no answer at all.

Jardine simply was asked to perform the impossible, and he didn't perform it.

In a way, for an agriculturist who has spent nearly his whole life as a college professor, he's done pretty well. If his administration hasn't been a phenomenal success, neither has it been a calamitous failure. No critic denies that he has tried hard.

When he was appointed, two courses were open to him, in order to go down in history as the greatest man who ever held his portfolio.

1. Actually to make agriculture prosper like the green bay tree.

2. To play such sick politics that the farmers would acclaim him, regardless of concrete results.

He certainly hasn't filled prescription No. 1, perhaps because it was beyond human power, under existing conditions. Not being anything of a politician, he hasn't filled prescription No. 2.

And yet, though there's been a persistent undercurrent of grumbling, nobody's demanding that he be brought out and shot at sunrise, which is saying quite a little, considering the corn belt's general frame of mind.

As Jardine's successors, ex-Senator Dixon of Montana, ex-Governor Carey of Wyoming and Secretary Hoiler of the Kansas Board of Agriculture are chiefly suggested.

These are the identical names which were chiefly mentioned when Jardine went in. The choice doesn't seem to be very wide.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Choosing a Husband

Can anyone but the husband himself settle the following question?

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl 30 years old. I have a friend that has been away all summer and he knows I have been going with another boy, but he says he still wants to marry me. I love him very dearly and he says the same about me. He is 36, has been an awful man to roam around, but says he is ready to settle if I am. Do you think he would make a good husband? He is a good worker. I go with a boy of 23. He has lots of money and a nice car. Everybody says I would be foolish to give him up for the other, but I can't say I really love him. How would I explain to either one, or should I quit both and try to forget?"

"WEARY AND WONDERING"

If you really "dearly love" the first one, can you see why you hesitate. Generally—mind I don't say always—a woman is happier with a man who is older, rather than younger than she. I really think what is bothering you is what these friends of yours say. You'll have to be courageous, in case you decide to marry you have first friend, and tell the boy you are going to be married.

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON

HOUSEWIVES

I sometimes think that the greatest failure that woman has made in all the years of her progress is in the running of her home.

She has made great success in other branches of business, but in the one great business in which just because she is born a woman she is supposed to be proficient she fails. With all her interest in domestic science and other home-keeping theories very few women keep their homes as do men their offices.

Not one household in a hundred is run on business principles. Accounts are not kept nor any thought given to doing the mechanical work efficiently—rather the average woman seems to try and get along with spending all she is given in a kind of a hit or miss fashion with the sure knowledge that she will not have to give account of it to someone as does a man in his business.

That, perhaps, is the reason why housework is considered almost the lowest class of work in which a woman may engage. I have known very few girls or women who contracted to "do" housework that lived up to her contract. Housework should be just as honorable an occupation as nursing, and it is not nearly as hard.

Surely keeping a home clean and free from germs and the preparation of good food should carry with it just as much dignity as the caring for some poor body after germs or bad food had made one ill.

I have almost come to the conclusion that men could do better work in the home than women. At least, they would run it on business principles.

You go into places like ships or hotels or restaurants that are run by men, and you see none of the disorder and disintegration that you can find in the homes of even the well-to-do, where a woman is chief executive.

Take a woman whose income only allows her the help of one person. Just how shall she arrange her work so that the wheels shall turn noiselessly?

There certainly should be found a way that this could be done. A man would solve this problem right off the bat. Many people will say that the very fact that the one maid or helper does not eat her meals with the family works against loyal service.

This seems to me to be silly, and I was a maid I would feel as though my dignity was not all lost by having to wait on the table while the family ate. In fact, it would seem as though I would understand that as this was about the only time the family could all be together that of course they would want to be alone. I would know that waiting on table so that the mistress of the house or one else would be jumping up and making things uncomfortable was perhaps the one most important part of my duties.

I believe, however, that as the house where a girl works is in reality her home, that she should have some place where she could receive company.

Of course all this is obviated if a girl comes in for so many hours a day and then leaves. This seems to me to be about the easiest solution. But if a woman is paid by the hour then she should give good measure of work for that hour—and the time which she takes for her dawled over lunch-hour must be taken out, as is the hour that is given to a man for his mid-day meal.

Memo: The very slipshod manner in which the woman at the head of the household rules her employes shows conclusively women have really made a failure of the efficient administration of the home.

Xenia Merchants Overwhelm Piqua Eleven 51-0

VISITORS FURNISH SMALL OPPOSITION TO LOCALS' ATTACK

Straight Foot Ball Wins For Improved Xenia Outfit

So strong offensively they piled up eight touchdowns, scoring in every period, and so strong defensively that the opposition failed to register as much as a single first down during the contest, a greatly improved Xenia Merchants football team overwhelmed the Battery E, 135th Infantry eleven from Piqua 51 to 0 Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

Xenia made ten first downs but a majority of the touchdowns were of the long range variety. The Merchants looked entirely different from the rather weak eleven which lost its opening encounter to the Dayton Buckinghams a week ago. Merchants scored their first touchdown in the first two minutes of play. Smith returned Piqua's kickoff forty yards. Towles traveled around end for twenty more after which Holton clicked off twenty more and a touchdown around the opposite side of the line. Perrine's kick for extra point was blocked.

Piqua kicked off again and on the first play Smith ran off tackle for a fifty yards, placing the ball on Piqua's twenty. Towles registered a second touchdown on a twenty-yard run and a pass, Holton to Perrine, gained the extra point. Xenia kicked but Piqua was as weak offensively as defensively and punted shortly afterward. Merchants launched another march. A pass, Smith to Perrine, was completed for a fifty-yard gain. Two line plunges earned a first down and Smith then shot off tackle for thirty yards through the line and a third score. A pass for the extra point failed.

Xenia scored once in the second period on the first play after Piqua had kicked off. Smith staged the most spectacular run of the contest, crashing through the line for seventy yards through a broken field for a touchdown. The extra point was good.

As the second half started, Xenia received and carried the ball to Piqua's forty. Merchants reeled off three first downs and finally Smith plunged through the line for ten yards and a score. Smith received a pass from Holton for extra point.

Piqua elected to receive but several line plays lost instead of gained ground and the visitors were forced to kick from behind their own goal line. The punt traveled to the Piqua thirty-yard mark and Towles returned it for a touchdown. The extra point was not made.

Xenia received and worked the ball to its own forty. The locals made four straight first downs and a pass, Smith to Perrine, was completed for a twenty-yard gain and another score. Yeakley's kick for extra point was wide.

A recovered fumble paved the way for the scoring of Xenia's final touchdown in the fourth period after an ancient play had been resurrected. Smith received a kickoff and punted immediately to Piqua's fifteen. The Piqua receiver fumbled and Fuller recovered for Xenia. Then Fuller, in two attempts, went across the line for the final score.

Xenia attempted eight forward passes. Six were incomplete but two were complete for a net gain of seventy yards. Piqua tossed three passes, but two were incomplete and the third was intercepted.

Xenia's eleven played as one unit and the backfield worked in machine-like fashion. The line also showed the effect of coaching by Paul Halder. Halder personally played a few minutes and was largely responsible for one of the scores. Bob Yeakley, former Xenia High School star, was in the line-up and played a fine game. "Bull Dog" Smith played a sensational

Greene County hunters will take the field Tuesday with the prospect of being entitled to bag only five hares or rabbits in one day and with it unlawful to have more than that number in their possession at any one time, under terms of a new law enacted by the last General Assembly of Ohio.

Hares and rabbits may be taken and possessed from November 15 to January 1, 1928. Equipment of hunters must not exceed a gun or a gun and dog. The animals must be bought or sold during the rabbit season only.

Rabbits or hares must not be killed, injured or pursued earlier than one hour before sunrise or later than one hour after sunset, the law provides.

Pheasants and Hungarian partridge may be hunted from November 15 to November 25, the open season lasting ten days. Two cock pheasants and six partridge is the bag limit for one day.

Hunters hunting off their own land are required to have a license for hunting and trapping and all persons should obtain permission to hunt before entering upon the property of another person, it is warned by District Game Warden Karl Keller.

Land owners are urged by Warden Keller to grant desirable sportsmen the privilege of a day afield. Hunters are requested to respect the rights and property of the land owners.

The new law limiting the taking and possessing of hares and rabbits to five per day is a conservation law as this number is considered sufficient for the average family.

"It is not the hunter who can kill the greatest number of game but rather the sportsman who gets the greatest thrill with the lesser kill of game," Keller declares.

Game protectors will be afield during the open season to see that the law is strictly adhered to. It is advised that the taking of rabbits with traps will not be permitted.

Mr. Keller asks that any violations of the law be reported to the attention of the nearest game protector.

WILBERFORCE IDLE WHEN FOE CANCELS

Wilberforce University's football eleven was idle last week because of an eleventh hour cancellation of the scheduled inter-sectional game with Morris Brown University at Atlanta, Ga.

Morris Brown cancelled because of financial difficulties, Wilberforce officials learned.

Wilberforce is scheduled to play Tennessee State College on the Wilberforce Gridiron Saturday afternoon in the final home game of the season, but there is a possibility this contest may also be cancelled.

Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters M.D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

My Dear Followers:

When sending for material which we offer you, please remember to enclose a STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose TEN cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, NOT OVER 200 WORDS, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Don't forget the STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE if you expect me to send you the information I have offered. —Lulu Hunt Peters.

Leopardy Skins

While you know the leopard cannot change its spots, many of you have hopes of changing yours, evidently, from the numerous requests I receive asking me to write on how to get rid of dark and white spots on the skin. So today I am going to write on both of them.

The dark spots are known as Chloasma, and the white spots as Vitiligo, or Leucoderma (leuco, white; derma, skin). I'll take up chloasma first.

CHLOASMA is a term applied to increased pigmentation of the skin. It occurs as variously shaped and sized spots of a yellowish or brownish or blackish color. There is no elevation of the skin and the surface usually remains smooth. The spots generally shade off gradually into the normal surrounding skin. The face is usually the site for the common variety, although the spots may be found occasionally on the trunk and other parts.

Causes: Chloasma spots may be caused by sunburning, blisters or irritation due to pressure, friction or scratching. These gradually fade. A type of chloasma known as symptomatic chloasma includes all forms of pigment deposits which occur during systemic disease such as tuberculosis, malaria and anemia, or diseases of the internal secretory glands, such as the adrenals (glands over the kidneys), pituitary (gland in the skull), thyroid (gland in the neck) etc. Chronic indigestion with constipation and absorption of putrefactive products may also cause this type.

The type Chloasma Uterian is that due to some functional or organic change in the uterus (womb) and is most often seen during pregnancy (but it may occur in diseases of this organ). It is most frequently seen on the forehead, but sometimes on the neck and occasionally on other parts of the body. It usually disappears after confinement.

Treatment: This has to be directed towards the cause. Still-wagon states that the discoloration sometimes can be removed by local applications, and when it is impossible to discover any disturbance as the cause, then reliance is to be placed upon local treatment. The local treatment consists of the application of remedies that will peel the skin. They must be applied by a skillful skin specialist. Lemon juice and peroxide of hydrogen can be home tried.

Vitiligo or Leucoderma. The white spots that come on the body are the opposite to "liver spots" or chloasma. In that instead of having extra deposits of pigment or coloring matter, the melanin pigment is all in them. (Sometimes, however, the edges of the white spots there will be more pigment than normal.) The size of the patches vary from that of a ten-cent piece to immense areas involving nearly the whole body. The general health does not seem to be affected and there seems to be no change in the sensibility of the skin on the spots.

except an unusual sensitivity to the sun's rays. If these spots are on the scalp or other hairy regions, the hair turns white.

The medical text books say the cause of the disease is not known. It may be due to a disturbance of the internal secretory or ductless glands, or it may be due to a disturbance of the nervous supply to the part. Not knowing the cause of them, the treatment is also unsatisfactory. Sometimes physicians use the glandular products for medication.

I suggest you have a thorough physical examination for both of these conditions. Of course, all the suggestions I give in the column regarding balanced diet, exercise and prevention of constipation, etc., should be practiced. We have articles on both these subjects which you may have by sending a fully self addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Next: Duodenal and Stomach Ulcers.

NOTE: Please send in stamped, addressed envelope with requests for answers.

EXPLAINS NEED OF CHRIST AT CHURCH

The Rev. W. H. Tilford, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, answered the question "Are we in need of Christ?" at the second of the series of services on the Gospel of Mark, at the Reformed Church, Sunday night.

The message was based on Christ's statement that "they that are whole have no need of a physician, but they that are sick, I came not to call the righteous but sinners." The speaker gave the setting of the passage in the Book and its meaning, deducing Christ's interpretation, that he was a physician and that sin was a deadly disease to be cured by Jesus alone. A chart of "spiritual diseases" was used in the discussion.

In the closing part of the discussion, the Rev. Mr. Tilford pointed out the point that every one was in need of Christ, and that Christ reached everyone in His cure of sin. If he would come to Him believing.

The Rev. D. A. Sellers presided and will preach next Sunday evening at the Presbyterian Church on "Are we serving Christ?"

The Reformed Church orchestra played four numbers during the service.

DIES AT INFIRMARY

Robert McKinley, 75, inmate at the Greene County Infirmary, died Sunday morning at the institution. He had been an invalid some time and was cared for at the infirmary for two or three years.

He is survived by a sister who lives in Clinton County. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon with burial in Woodland Cemetery.

Money Love

By BEATRICE BURTON Author of "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "HONEY LOU," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

READ THIS FIRST:

LILY LEXINGTON is the spoiled only daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, who have always lived beyond their means. Her mother's fondest dreams are realized when she becomes engaged to STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor much older than herself. On the day after he proposes she goes downtown to meet her chum, SUE CAIN, and sees a man watching her through the crowd. She is oddly attracted by him before she sees that he is wearing a taxi-driver's uniform. Moved by a sudden impulse, she jumps into the cab and he drives her home. Their friendship begins that day. Every day after that she goes downtown to see him and learns that he owns his own cab in a company of which his friend, ROY JETTERSON, is head. He intends to sell the cab to raise money to finance a piston ring invention of his, he tells her. Lily realizes that she is in love with him. But about the time she makes up her mind to break off her engagement to Staley, her mother proudly announces it and the wedding day is set for early in June.

Mrs. Lexington hires a new chauffeur and when he comes he is Pat France, whom Lily was trying to forget! She goes for a drive with him, and thrilled by seeing him again, tells him how much she cares for him. That night she leaves a card game at Staley's house to go for a drive with Pat, pretending she has a headache. Pat takes her home and Staley telephones to see if she arrived there safely. He is suspicious of Lily's friendship with her chauffeur, having seen them together once in Pat's cab. Lily asks CARRIE, the maid to talk to Staley.

Sue Cain warns Lily that Staley won't stand for her traipsing around with Pat as she has been doing, but Lily makes up her mind that nothing really matters to her but Pat, anyway, and wonders how in the world she is going to marry Staley in three weeks.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XIII

The next morning Lily did an unheard of thing—for her. She got up at seven o'clock.

She bathed, brushed her bright hair, until it shone like spun copper, powdered and painted her face with the greatest care and slipped into a brand-new sports outfit that she had bought for her honeymoon. A cunning silky thing of sea-shell pink bound with white beads.

Two or three times, while she was dressing, she tiptoed out into the hall to look out of the back window and see if Pat was up.

The last time she went, she saw him. He was flung on his back on the driveway, doing something to the car. As she watched, he crawled under it and got up, brushed off his clothes with a clean handkerchief. How good-looking he was in his shirt-sleeves, with his head uncovered and the sun shining on his dark uneven waves of hair.

Lily caught her breath as she looked at him. She wanted to run down to him and put her hands in his hair and lay her cheek close against his lean, sunburned face. She had never felt that way about a man before. Never.

She could hardly wait to finish dressing. She pulled on her slipper, gave one last look at herself in the mirror and hurried down the back stairs.

The back stairs opened into the kitchen. And as Lily opened the door at the top of them an appetizing odor of frying eggs and sizzling ham came up to her.

She heard Carrie's voice: "Sit right down, Pat. The morning paper's on the table, and your cigarettes beside them. . . . And how do you like your coffee? Weak or strong enough to float a battleship?"

Lily went on down into the kitchen.

Carrie stood at the stove, getting breakfast for two. There were two plates warming in the hot closet. The coffee tray on the kitchen table had two cups and saucers, two spoons, two tiny pitchers of cream upon it.

And on the screened porch beyond the kitchen the table was set for two! In the center of it stood a little glass vase of flowers, and it was covered with a shining white linen cloth—"The helps" tablecloths were always colored ones in the Lexingtons' household.

"Coffee for two, eh, Carrie?" Lily asked, her voice sharp with sarcasm.

Carrie started, turned around and flushed. Lily saw that she had "crimped" her hair for the early morning occasion, had put talcum powder on her nose, and a large lace collar around the neck of her uniform. She looked as pretty as a peach.

"Just let me catch her wearing that collar to work in!" thought Lily. "And just let her find the best table linen out on that porch table!"

"I was just getting the new chauffeur a bite to eat," explained Carrie, getting pinker and pinker. "I thought I'd sit down with him, had to be sociable. Aggie went home last night and ain't back yet, so there's just the two of us this morning. I beat up a little biscuit."

Guiltily she opened the oven door and took out a pan of golden-brown Parker House rolls. She covered them with a clean tea-towel and set them in the hot-closet.

"Pat won't have time for breakfast, so you needn't go to all these elaborate preparations," Lily told her slyly. "I'm going to a picnic, and he's going to drive me right away. Where's that picnic hamper of ours, Carrie? I want you to pack it for me right away. . . . I'll take those rolls along, and we can fill a thermos bottle with the coffee and boil some eggs."

On the top shelf in the pantry were dozens of cans—smoked salmon, baked beans in tomato sauce, sardines, dill pickles, pearl onions, ripe olives, spaghetti.

While Carrie was boiling the eggs and pouring the coffee into the thermos bottle, Lily stood on a chair and dropped tinned beans and olives and sardines into the picnic basket.

At seven forty-five she appeared before Pat in the backyard, holding it in her arms. She beamed at him, smiling because it was May and sunny and the day was before them.

"We're going to have a picnic," she said, and all her happiness was in the tones of her light voice. "Just you and I. . . . Here, take this basket and put it in the back of the car. I'm going to ride up in front with you."

He shook his head, his arms hanging at his sides. "We can't do it. You know we can't," he said quietly. "It's hopeless—and I'm going to quit my job here at the end of the week. I heard your Dad and Mother talking last night in the car when I brought them home—Gosh! They look upon this Drummond guy as their son already. Why, you're as good as married now."

"Don't you stand there and tell me what I am! You put this basket in the car and we'll get out in the country some place where we can talk!—I'm a long way from being married to Staley Drummond, so just write than on your cuff, Mr. Taxi-cab!"

He shook his head again, stubbornly.

"You do as I tell you," Lily told him at a shout. She stamped her foot on the cement of the driveway.

Carrie came out upon the back porch and pretended to be shaking crumbs out of a tablecloth that had no crumbs in it.

Lily knew she was listening. "Please let's go, Pat," she begged and put the heavy basket into the car herself. She slammed the door upon it. "You don't want Carrie to come on, eh, Pat? Say, do you? Come on, hop in and show me some speed. Let's see if we can find a babbling brook by eight o'clock!"

"We shouldn't do it, you know," Pat said, but while he spoke he was getting into the car. Lily jumped in from the other side and they started.

"Carrie will probably run right upstairs and tell Mother that I've eloped with the chauffeur," she laughed as they rushed through the cool morning air that was sweet with the fragrance of lilacs and little new green leaves and young grass.

It seemed to blow all her troubles away and for a minute she forgot Staley Drummond and the engraved wedding invitations that the stationer had delivered at the house yesterday, and the white satin wedding dress and the lace veil with its coronet of waxen orange blossoms all ready for the tenth of June. She forgot her mother and Sue Cain and the diamond engagement ring that she had left lying on the top of her dressing table. . . .

"Well, here we are, Pat! Just you and I—and isn't it heavenly!" she sighed, and laid her cheek down against his sleeve.

Pat made a short grunting sound in his throat and shrugged one broad shoulder. "I don't know whether it's 'heavenly' or not," said he. "Your friend, Drummond, is going to be pretty sore when he stops at your house this morning and finds that you've gone on a picnic trip with your chauffeur."

Lily didn't care. "I'll have this one day, anyway," she made up her mind. "And suppose Staley does stop at the house and find me gone? I can think up some kind of alibi to square things with him."

She giggled. "Carrie was certainly fixing you up for a banquet this morning when I stopped her," she said. "Flowers on the table and the best silver, and a dish of bar-le-due—Jimmy crickets, but it was funny. I never thought I'd have Carrie for a rival!" She stopped short at the grim half-grin look that crossed the face so close to hers.

"Yes, that's just it! You and I don't belong in the same class," he said gravely. "I belong to the class that works hard for its living, and you're at the top of the pack!—We're as far apart as the two poles, you and I!"

"It's your fault if we are, Pat. I want to be the best friend you have anywhere. But you keep pushing me away. . . . You keep telling me that I ought to be true to Staley Drummond when I don't want to be. I don't want anybody but you, Pat!—Ever!" She was swept off her feet by her feeling for him, in that moment.

"Ever since the first day I saw you I've been chasing you, haven't I, Pat France? I've made a fool of myself—and I'm not through making a fool of myself. Pat, I want to marry you—now, today, before I can change my mind."

He did not answer.

But he slowed down the car, turned it in the road, and started back towards town.

"You're not taking me home?" asked Lily, and he shook his head. "I want to show you something," he told her. "Better get into the back seat, hadn't you?" You might pass Drummond, or your friend, Miss Cain, or someone like that on the road—and it would look better for you to be back there where you belong."

"I'll stay right here," said Lily, her soft chin set firmly.

She sat quietly in her corner of the seat while they went back over the familiar ways to her own house. They swept past it, and on into town.

Through the business section they went to a humble section beyond the A & B railroad tracks—a section of little low houses with neat little backyards, narrow sidewalks with children playing on them even at this early hour, and four-o'clock hedges—a neat clean little neighborhood of people who were not too poor and certainly not too rich. A neighborhood of the finest class in the world—the lower middle-class. The backbone of this great country of middle-class people.

The car turned into a little narrow street.

"This is where I live," said Pat. "In the next house."

The house was a low white one with dark brown shutters. The morning sun shone in its front windows so that it seemed to twinkle and wink from behind its neat white fence.

There were brown rocking chairs on the front porch, and big pots of begonias and scarlet geraniums. The curtains in the windows were crisp white dotted-muslin ones, and a white cat was curled up on one window ledge.

"Would you live in a house like that?" asked Pat. "And do every lick of work in it, yourself?"

A COURTEOUS BANDIT

CHICAGO, Ill.—A young couple, Miss Mable Helger and Frank Detloff, were held up by a bandit. "I beg your pardon, but I must have your valuables," said the bandit. He took Miss Helger's fur coat and rings and $48 from Detloff. After taking $20 from the girl's purse the bandit thanked them, most courteously and disappeared.

EAGLES HEAR STATE SPEAKER; INITIATE 17 NEW CANDIDATES

Organization work of the fraternity was discussed by Adolph A. Miller, Columbus, noted surgeon, and lecturer for the state organization department of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in an address before members of Xenia Aerie, No. 1689 at initiatory exercises Sunday afternoon at the Aerie hall.

Seventeen candidates comprising the Armistice Day and Twentieth Anniversary classes, and constituting one of the largest initiations in the Aerie's history, were taken into the order at the meeting. The speaker said in part:

"Every organization must have a good reason for being, or it cannot long exist. The Fraternal Order of Eagles was first started in Seattle, Wash., twenty-three years ago, as a society of mutual aid and friendship among a few people of congenial tastes and similar occupations. Within the twenty-three years it has grown to an organization of more than 500,000 members, who, with their families make it a fraternity embracing two and one-half million souls.

"This great fraternity is getting in readiness for an active part to bring about the enactment of an Old Age Pension Law in the state of Ohio, a law that is being sponsored by the Fraternal Order of Eagles for the benefit of humanity."

Following the exercises, an elaborate banquet was served the members by the program committee, consisting of Paul Hamilton, Adrew George, Alva Sheeley and James Lynch.

Plans were formulated at the meeting for a drive for the "Dr. Frank M. Chambliss Class" to be initiated Sunday, December 11. This class will be in honor of the Aerie physician.

Aerie members were particularly interested in signing new applicants for the Armistice Day class due to the fact the local Aerie sent the largest percentage of its members to the army during the World War of any Aerie in the United States.

SUPREME PRELATE TO ADDRESS LODGE MEMBERS THURSDAY

Members of Ivanhoe Lodge, No. 56, K. of P. and Triumph Temple, No. 467, Pythian Sisters, will open their special session, Thursday evening, November 17, at Knights of Pythias Lodge, Hall, Detroit and Second Sts., Xenia, at 7:30 p. m., by presenting the Rev. Frederick S. Attwood, supreme prelate, Knights of Pythias of the World, who will deliver his famous lecture, "Am I My Brother's Keeper?" The Rev. Mr. Attwood is a noted speaker and orator and appeared in Xenia two years ago. He travels over the country for speaking engagements, although totally blind. Trinity Orchestra will furnish music preceding the lecture, interspersed with songs and readings. The service is not for Knights only, it is announced, but for the entire public, free.

The Rev. Mr. Attwood will address the Central High students at the Jean B. Elwell Auditorium, Thursday at 2 p. m.

Vernon Hampton, W. C. Bloom and Jacob Kany, compose the committee in charge of the K. of P. meeting.

"SICK-HEADACHES?"

Torturing, maddening! Most always trace their cause to a lazy liver, constipation and a sour-stomach. Poison of fermented foods retained, instead of passing, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissues, it causes congestion and that acute, sickening pain.

Blackburn's Cascara-Royal Pills quickly and surely remove the cause by stimulating the liver, toning up the bowels, nerves, making the poison ferment move out and out, thus purifying the blood and curing the headache. The effect is almost instantaneous.

Women, because of their sensitive organism are especially prone to periodical headaches, should not suffer if a drugstore is nearby—for Blackburn's Cascara-Royal Pills have helped millions during the past 25 years. Non-secret formula, small, sweet, prompt and "Better Than Castor Oil." Two sizes—15c—30c.

Iowa Woman Found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Always Helpful

Vinton, Iowa—"When I was seventeen years old I had to stay at home from school. I finally had to quit school. I was so weak, I suffered for about two years before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then I picked up one of your books and read it. I began taking the medicine. Now I am a housekeeper with six children, and I have taken it before each one was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. When I am not as well as can be I take it. I have been doing this for over thirteen years and it always helps me. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."—Mrs. Frank Sellers, 619 7th Avenue, Vinton, Iowa.

Many girls in the fourth generation are learning thru their own personal experiences the beneficial effects of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mothers who took it recommend it to their daughters as a dependable medicine.

MRS. BERT WINTER CLAIMED BY DEATH

Mrs. Martha McClellan Winter, 65, wife of Bert J. Winter, passed away at her home, 793 W. Main St., Monday morning about 1:30 o'clock. She had been in failing health since August and death was caused by heart trouble and complications.

Mrs. Winter was born on a farm west of Xenia, the daughter of David and Melina McClellan. She spent her entire life in Greene County and has lived in Xenia for a number of years. She was a member of the First Presbyterian Church and was an active member of the Ladies Aid Society and two missionary organizations. Mr. and Mrs. Winter would have been married forty-one years December 22.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Winter leaves one son, Erskine Winter, this city; four sisters, Mrs. Cynthia Ginn and the Misses Emma Zetta and Margaret McClellan, Washington, D. C., and Frank McClellan, Xenia.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with burial in Woodland Cemetery.

GRANGE MEMBERS TO ATTEND SESSIONS

A number of members of Greene County Pomona Grange will attend sessions of the state and national Grange meeting in Cleveland this week. The state convention will begin Tuesday and the national sessions Wednesday, to continue the remainder of the week.

Nineteen Greene Countyans will take the seventh degree, the highest degree in the order, during the meeting. About 8,000 candidates are expected to take this degree.

Among those attending from this county will be: S. H. Shawhan, county deputy and Mrs. Shawhan, county juvenile deputy; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mason, Caesar Creek; Mr. and Mrs. Clark Meredith, Miami Grange; delegates, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mendenhall, Spring Valley Grange; Raymond Middleton and son, and Albert Jones of Caesar Creek; the Cosler family, from Charity Grange; Miss Anna Cook, William Baker and J. L. Stevenson, Miami Grange; Mrs. Louis Hutchins, Xenia Grange and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shade, Fairfield Valley Grange.

INDIGESTION WILL SPOIL YOUR LIFE

How to End Stomach Troubles Although indigestion may not be chronic with many people it is surprising how even slight pains or feelings of fullness after eating steal much of life's sparkle and happiness. Perhaps you scarcely notice it in the early stages, but remember indigestion never cures itself and usually gets worse. Be on your guard then.

The safest, surest and easiest way to end indigestion, heartburn or flatulence is to take a little "Pape's Diapiesin" after meals or whenever pain is felt. This quickly stops your discomfort by neutralizing excess stomach acid and preventing fermentation, and at the same time soothes, heals and strengthens your delicate stomach lining.

Get a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapiesin" today—every drugstore sells and recommends it, as a sure remedy for stomach troubles. Don't let indigestion spoil your life—you can't have stomach troubles and "Pape's Diapiesin" too! —Adv.
